Nuclear Attack Blueprint Fixes Communist Targets

FUMES KILL FOUR SAILORS

HALIFAX (CP) — Four crew members of the Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure died early today after they were overcome by aviation gasoline fumes aboard ship during fleet exercises off the coast.

The victims were identified as LS Gary Swim, Halifax; LS Gordon Hayes Morrell, Halifax; LS Donald Raymond Patterson, Halifax, and OS John Boulter, Summerside, P.E.I.

●

Vice-Admiral J. C. O'Brien, commander Maritime Command, said the men were venting fuel tanks aboard the carrier when they were asphyxiated.

The Bonaventure was about 100 miles southwest of Sable Island at Nova Scotia's southern tip.

The admiral said aviation gasoline from the carrier's tanks was returned to storage at an oil refinery in Dartmouth, N.S., last Monday morning prior to her departure for fleet exercises with other Canadian ships off the coast.

●

The removal of fuel from these tanks is a standard procedure, he said.

A board of inquiry has been ordered.

The carrier left here Monday afternoon on her last trip as a fighting ship before being decommissioned next April.

Bonner in Business With Brewer Chief

VANCOUVER (CP)—The administrator of the British Columbia Brewers' Institute testified Tuesday he and the then-Attorney-General Robert Bonner entered a business partnership involving an apartment in 1967.

The attorney-general's department is responsible for the provincial Liquor Act. The institute is an organization formed by the province's four major breweries—Carlings, O'Keefe's, Labatt's and Molson's.

Arthur Fouks, institute administrator, told the B.C. enquiry into provincial liquor laws he and Mr. Bonner, now a senior executive with MacMillan, Bloedel Ltd., had been partners in an apartment building for about 2½ years. Mr. Bonner resigned his portfolio May 27, 1968.

Mr. Foulks appeared before the commission to explain the working of the institute and to deny statements made by brewer Ben Ginter of Prince George Sept 9.

At that session of the commission, Mr. Ginter said he had been referred to Foulks on a matter involving Ginter's Tartan Breweries Ltd.

Mr. Ginter quoted Foulks as saying, "Well, for a $10,000 retainer I will take a look at it and see what I can do."

Mr. Foulks denied he ever talked to Mr. Ginter on the matter and denied he had ever made such a statement.

The business connection between Mr. Foulks and Mr. Bonner developed out of written questions put to Foulks by Ginter.

The question: "What is your relationship with Mr. Bonner?"

Reply: "My relationship with Mr. Bonner is one of friendship since 1938. My relationship (with Bonner) in respect to the institute is absolutely nothing. It never has been and it isn't at this time."

The question: "Are you business partners?"

Reply: "The answer is yes . . . Mr. Bonner and myself are partners in an apartment and have been for 2½ years to the best of my knowledge. I may be off base by a few months . . ."

In another reply, Mr. Foulks said the apartment partnership is the only financial involvement between him and Mr. Bonner.

Mr. Foulks said he had also acted as fiscal agent for Mr. Bonner during an election campiagn but at no time did he receive any funds for the free enterprise education fund, the Social Credit fund-raising organization.

In his statement to the commission Mr. Foulks said that since the Sept. 9 hearing "distortions and innuendos have been made inferring that I have had extensive dealings with the Liquor Control Board.

"In the 20 years I have been practising law I have never acted for a distillery or for a winery in any matter," he said.

"With the exception of holding a watching brief at these hearings and holding the position of administrator of the British Columbia Brewers' Instute, I have never acted for a brewery in any matter."

SMOULDERING ASHES and little more are all that remain today of a home for the aged in Notre Dame du Lac, Que., which was destroyed by fire. Between 68 and 72 persons were in the three-storey wooden building when the fire started and charred bodies were still being removed this morning. The death toll was set at 38. See also Page 38. 'Stood at the Gates of Hell' Says Quebec Fire Survivor

NOTRE - DAME - DU - LAC, Que. (CP) — "My wife and I stood at the gates of hell," Denis Violet, 87, a survivor of Tuesday's fire at a home for the aged here, said today. "Then the devil dragged her in but let me go."

His wife, Marie, 77, was one of the 38 victims of the fire that turned the private Repos du Vieillard into an inferno.

"My good Marie—why would the devil want to take her?" Denis Violet asked, his voice breaking and his body trembling as he tried to recount the story of his escape.

He said he and his wife had a room only five feet from a fire escape at the rear of the wooden building. But the fire escape was of no use to them.

When they got to it, the smoke was too thick to penetrate and they had to retreat along the corridor. Then it seemed to clear away for an instant and they shuffled back to the escape, only to see a huge gush of flames leap at them up the metal staircase.

They turned again towards the front door. Already the corridor felt like an oven. The soles of their feet were hot.

Suddenly a huge cloud of grey and yellow smoke rolled in on them from the back.

"I don't know why, but Marie slipped out of my arms," the distraught husband said.

"I turned around, tried to reach her with my hands. But the smoke was all around us and I couldn't see her, or even touch her.

"She was gone, she wasn't there anymore."

He finally reached safety by crawling along the corridor and out the front door. Some people had already gathered outside and they restrained him when he tried to go back into the building.

Mr. and Mrs. Violet had each been paying $99 a month for room and board at the Repos du Vieillard. Every month they handed their old-age pension cheques for $107 over to the management of the home and got back $8 each for incidental expenses.

Family Planning Major USC Aim

In India there is a traditional belief that men must prove their virility by fathering a child each year.

And in a country where the mortality rate until recently was high a man and wife provided their own social insurance by having enough children to ensure they would be cared for in their old age.

The pattern of a child a year is centuries' old.

So, too, is the pattern of starvation.

Children are one of the few joys an Indian couple have in an existence that often consists of a daily struggle for survival.

The Indian government has introduced, with some success, family planning projects in urban areas.

But in the rural areas the traditions are more difficult to change.

In the Kodai mountains area of India the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada has introduced a pilot project in family planning.

A study conducted jointly by the government and the Ford

Foundation revealed that people must discover the need for family planning through their concern for already existing children.

"Indian parents love their children very much," said Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, USC executive director.

"Family planning must be an educational process, stressing maternal and child welfare."

The USC has hired one of the first graduates of the Gardhigram Institute, which is training field workers in the new concept of teaching family planning.

A native of the Kodai region, he is travelling through 14 villages in that area attempting to convince parents of the logic of having fewer children and less hunger.

The family planning project is only one of more than 100 projects being carried out by the USC in eight countries.

Money raised in Victoria during the Children of Asia campaign will be used to buy milk and barley for children in India and Korea.

Donations of money should be sent to the Times office, 2631 Douglas. Donations of colthing and quilts can be dropped off at the USC depot, 2333 Government.

PRICES HEAD SEES INFLATION CURBED

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. John Young, head of the prices and incomes commission, was optimistic Tuesday about Canada's prospects of controlling inflation as he faced a Commons committee on supplementary estimates.

He was seeking an additional $626,000 to carry on the work of the commission.

Dr. Young agreed with Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) that the economic effects of the Vietnam war on the U.S. economy have "greatly influenced" the economic situation in Canada but insisted the two economics were not entirely locked together.

"The difference of opinion is over how long the string is."

Military Appeals Court Says No To News Ban on Massacre Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Military Appeals has ruled out a ban on further news and pictures about the alleged massacre of South Vietnamese civilians at the village of My Lai.

Tuesday's unanimous decision emphasized that the colonel who will preside at the court martial of Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. seems to have all the power he needs to screen out any prejudicial publicity.

Publishers have the job of seeing that news stories are proper and accurate, the decision said, and military judges have the job of guarding court martials against outside influences.

"Neither should be permitted to overwhelm the other," the unsigned opinion said, "for both a responsible press and a fair trial are constitutionally protected."

The ruling seems to support the view that gags on the press have not been authorized by the U.S. Supreme Court and are probably unnecessary to assure a defendant a fair trial.

Moreover, the decision evidently does not accept the popular notion that a clash between the public's right to know and the defendant's right to a fair trial is inevitable.

Maj. Kenneth Raby, Calley's military defence counsel, and Capt. Aubrey Daniel, the prosecutor, had asked jointly that the court issue a pre-trial injunction against all American radio and television networks and stations, news services, newspapers and magazines.

They would have been ordered "to cease further publication, broadcasting, televising or otherwise disseminating through any mass means of communication, any accounts, quotations, or statements by any person concerning any acts or events which were allegedly witnessed by him or her" in the Vietnam village March 16, 1968.

They also would have prohibited use of "any photographs, sketches, or other pictorial reproductions purporting to represent the bodies of persons allegedly killed in the village."

Calley, now stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., has been charged with the murder of 109 Vietnamese civilians in the village that day. He was then an army platoon leader.

There is considerable doubt the military appeals court has the authority to issue the kind of injunction sought against the media or that it could be enforced.

Moscow Warning NATO Plan's Goal

Times News Services

BRUSSELS — NATO defence ministers today approved plans to use nuclear weapons against Warsaw Pact nations in the event of a Communist attack in Europe.

No nuclear bombs would fall on Russia in the early stages of the conflict, diplomatic sources said, because NATO would hope to deter Russia by bombing her satellites.

If a Communist troop advance continued, Soviet targets would have to be considered in later stages, the meeting decided.

Approval of the NATO nuclear strike plan today comes as communist members of the Warsaw Pact are meeting in Moscow, apparently in search of a common policy toward friendship overtures made by West Germany, a NATO member nation.

Observers also feel it is likely the communist leaders like the Western Allies, are weighing the chances of an all-European security conference sometime next year.

During the same sesssion today in which the nuclear policy gained approval, Britain pledged to boost its NATO forces to plug a gap left by scheduled Canadian withdrawals from Europe.

Canada plans to reduce its NATO force stationed in West Germany by 4,800 men, about half its total there. British Defence Secretary Denis Healey said the relatively cheap measures he was proposing would make any raid on NATO airfields by enemy aircraft between 12 and 18 times more difficult than it now would be.

FOUR TOP POINTS

The four main points he proposed:

● Retention of 42 RAF B-57 strike and reconnaissance planes which were scheduled for withdrawal from West Germany next year. They now will remain until 1971.

● Assignment of an additional RAF squadron of supersonic Lightning jet fighter-bombers to the Supreme Allied command in Europe in the evenf of crisis.

● Immediate strengthening of two major RAF airfields in West Germany with additional aircraft shelters, anti-aircraft guns and two ground-to-air guided-missile squadrons.

● Dispatch of British Signals troops to Northern Army group headquarters in West Germany to replace a Canadian unit scheduled for withdrawal.

Healey also said Britain hopes that the 6th Brigade of the British Army—brought home last year—will be able to rejoin the British Army of the Rhine soon.

But the return of the brigade depends on agreement with West Germany on meeting foreign-exchange costs, he said. Healey said he hoped to be able to announce a definite

Indian Protest Book Serialized

The Unjust Society, Alberta Indian leader Harold Cardinal's scathing book on the situation of Canada's native population, is to be released Thursday.

The same day, The Times publishes the first of a three-part condensation of the book, which has already raised a furor in federal government circles.

Cardinal charged Monday copies of the book had been obtained improperly by Indian affairs officials but had been returned to the publisher after a protest was lodged with Ottawa.

Grit MP Quits Party Over Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Perry Ryan (L—Toronto Spadina) today quit the Liberal party to sit as an independent member of the Commons.

"I've come to the conclusion that I cannot give continued support" to the government, Ryan, a Toronto lawyer, told the House. He asked that he be seated as an independent.

There was desk-thumping applause from opposition members as Ryan, first elected to the Commons in 1962, made the announcement.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureaux said a seat would be found for Ryan.

After Ryan made his brief announcement, the only other independent MP, Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, said: "It would seem the honorable member has joined the ranks of the Independents."

Ryan, smiling broadly, nodded his assent.

Standing now in the 264-seat Commons: Liberals 153, Conservative 72, NDP 22, Creditiste 14, Independent 2, vacant 1.

Shortly after Ryan's announcement, Prime Minister Trudeau issued a news release in which he said he regretted the Liberal member's decision.

"Of the issues which Ryan mentioned to me as grounds for his resignation," said Trudeau, "two formed part of the Liberal party platform in the 1968 general election. The third has been the subject of exhaustive discussions in caucus and in caucus committees on which occasions Liberal members played a full and effective role."

This is the first defection from the Liberal party since Trudeau assumed office in April, 1968. Although former Transport Minister Paul Hellyer left the cabinet earlier this year, he has remained a member of the party and MP for Toronto Trinity.

ONE-UPMANSHIP INVENTOR DIES

TIMES NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — Satirist and humorist Stephen Potter died here Tuesday at 69 years.

Potter, best-known for his "one-upmanship" theory as expounded in the book of the same title, was also a serious scholar. In 1930 he published a study of D. H. Lawrence and in 1935 one of Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

Educated at Westminster and Merton College, Oxford, he was a lecturer in English at various universities.

Potter, who emergel as a humorist with publication of The Theory and Practice of Gamesmanship, or the Art of Winning Games Without Actually Cheating, in 1947, died in hospital of unannounced causes.

His humor was unique, consisting primarily of a scientific and sympathetic analysis of different types of humbug, which he solemnly described as a principle to be followed.

CYC Faces Trusteeship

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee will recommend Friday that the Company of Young Canadians be placed in trusteeship for a year, an informed source said today.

The broadcasting committee, which carried out a month-long inquiry into the CYC, also will recommend that the government take direct control of the company and reorganize it.

A move to disband the company and replace it with a new body was beaten off by a 10-to-7 committee vote Tuesday.

The committee had a final meeting scheduled for today to prepare a report to be placed before the Commons Friday.

The committee has been meeting behind closed doors since Monday, considering what to do with the three-year-old CYC.

The inquiry was spurred by allegations of subversive elements within the CYC by Lucien Saulnier, Montreal executive committee chairman, who said the social action agency should be disbanded.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier, another witness, and CYC executive director Claude Vidal said the company should be reorganized to clarify lines of authority.

Meanwhile the Company of Young Canadians today suspended its controversial St. Henri project in Montreal because of "the political activities of the project."

A statement from the company said executive director Claude Vidal had ordered Pierre Renaud, the CYC's Quebec co-ordinator, to close the CYC office on Rue St. Philippe.

Mr. Vidal had ordered that "all activities on the project stop immediately, all spending of CYC funds cease, all CYC material be recuperated, and the office closed."

The project, known as the St. Henri worker's committee, Tuesday challenged Mayor Jean Drapeau and Lucien Saulnier, Montreal executive committee chairman, to face St. Henri residents at a public meeting.

It was the project's response to charges of subversive activity levelled at it before a Commons committee inquiry last week by Mr. Saulnier and Montreal attorney Michel Cote.

Efficiency Needed

VANCOUVER (CP) — C. D. Evans, general secretary of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation, said Tuesday more efficiency is needed in the school system because taxpayers are beginning to rebel at costs.

Six-Month Jail Term For Ex-Vets' President

UCLUELET — B. Alfred Lock, ex-president of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans' Association here, has been sentenced to six months in jail for stealing $531 from the club's premises.

The bar manager testified that on May 25 last he found both the front and inside door of the bar had been forced open. The safe had been broken into and was empty.

The day after, Lock left Ucluelet by car for Vancouver. He was stopped by RCMP at Port Alberni, his car was searched and $355 was found on him, court was told.

A screwdriver in the car was sent to the crime research laboratory in Vancouver and identified as the one used in breaking into the club bar at Ucluelet.

Lock was remanded for sentence.

Singer Escapes Kidnapper

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cynthia Ann Birdsong, 30, a member of the soul singing group The Supremes, was held for more than one hour at knife-point by a barefoot kidnapper Tuesday night before she jumped from a speeding car on the Long Beach Freeway.

Miss Birdsong suffered bruises from her jump and was reported in satisfactory condition at Long Beach Memorial Hospital. She also was treated for minor knife slashes.

Police said the kidnapper, wearing a brown leather jacket, was hiding in a bedroom of the singer's Hollywood home when she returned in the evening.

Two friends, Charles Hewlett, 25, and Howard Meak, 25, had gone to the home earlier and were waiting for Miss Birdsong. They apparently were unaware of the intruder in the bedroom.

The man put a large knife to her neck when she entered the bedroom and, holding the knife under her chin, forced her to bind the two other men with their ties.

She was then forced to her car and held at knife-point as the man drove toward Long Beach.

Police said she jumped from the car and rolled across onto the edge of the freeway. She got up and ran against traffic until she was found by two California highway patrolmen.

REPLACE CANADIANS?

If the brigade is reassigned to NATO forces in West Germany, it could replace a Canadian armored unit scheduled for withdrawal. West Germany is planning to assign a tank regiment and an airborne brigade to NATO's First Corps in northern West Germany to plug the gap left by withdrawal of the Canadian army unit late next year.

First Sentence Under New Law

A 43-year-old city man, the first arrested in the area under the new federal drinking-driving legislation, was sentenced to two months in jail in court Tuesday and prohibited from driving for a year.

Allan Stewart, 39 Ontario, was charged with impaired driving early Tuesday morning by Saanich police after his car was stopped because it had no lights on.

The new drinking-driving legislation, which came into force Monday, gives police authority to demand a breath test from suspect drivers.

Stewart's test produced a reading of .13 per cent alcohol in his blood. It is now an offence to have more than .08.

Court was told the accused had just completed a 15-day jail term Saturday for intoxicated driving and had an earlier conviction in Alberta for impaired driving.

Judge William Ostler in sentencing the accused remarked that Stewart "seems to be self-destructive."

Jury Blames Faulty Crane On Death

A coroner's jury Tuesday night ruled misadventure and an inadequate mobile crane sling as causing the death of 22-year-old Victoria building laborer Nov. 26.

Americo C. de Frias, 2525 Shakespeare, died in a fall from a third-floor balcony at an apartment construction site in Esquimalt when the sling of particle board he was helping to unload tipped and knocked him to the ground.

The particle board load fell on top of him.

Fast Urged At Hunger Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican-Americans at a White House hunger conference urged their 3,000 fellow participants today to fast during the remainder of the session in protest of President Nixon's keynote speech and the "way the conference is going."

The Mexican-Americans asked other delegates to join them in depositing the remainder of their meal tickets in a box in a hallway at the site of the three-day meeting that ends Thursday.

"Spending $18.30 a day for meals, in my mind, is almost immoral when we are here to help the hungry," said Rev. Ralph Ruiz of San Antonio, Tex.

The call for a fast was just one expression of bitter criticism following Nixon's plea Tuesday for support of his legislative programs to fight poverty.

"The president has not called for any emergency relief for the nation's hungry," Ruiz said.

SCHOOL GETS WORKSHOP ADDITION

The provincial government Tuesday announced approval of a $59,146 addition to Saanich junior secondar, including a classroom-workshop for woodworking and electrical instruction.

The new space will complete additions planned under a 1968 $4 million referendum by the Saanich Peninsula school board.

Buildings and grounds superintendent Bryan Shaw said about $2.8 million have been committed to additions. The remaining $1.2 million will go toward interior renovations over the next two years.

Loan Approved

British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority has been authorized by the provincial cabinet to borrow up to $10 million by issuing of 25-year sinking fund bonds at an interest rate of eight per cent.

Bulgaria Almost Sure Of World Soccer Spot

LONDON (AP) — Three spots are left for the 16-team World Soccer Cup finals in Mexico next year and one of them almost certainly will go to Bulgaria.

The other two places rest on playoffs with Czechoslovakia meeting Hungary and Australia tackling Israel.

Italy, West Germany, Belgium, Sweden, Russia, Romania and defending champions England are through to the finals.

Those teams will represent Europe in the prestige tournament for soccer players and fans throughout the world.

El Salvador, Brazil, Uruguay, Mexico and Peru are through for the American continent.

Morocco is through for Africa.

Bulgaria plays Luxembourg away from home Dec. 7 and stands out as the favorite to win that group.

Luxembourg has lost all its five games so far. But an upset victory by Luxembourg could let in Poland.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Man is continually learning that he cannot escape the weather. It affects him in many and different ways, including his behavior.

When rain storms accompanied by thunder and lightning come down on us, there are more auto accidents than when the weather is good. You might think that it is the rain and the thunder that get drivers into accidents. In a roundabout way, perhaps. It is the atmospheric electricity in the air, caused by the storm, that affects drivers.

No matter how good you are at the wheel of a car, your driver reaction time is, on the average, slowed down when there is a marked change in number of charged ions in the atmosphere. When this evidence of atmospheric electricty goes away with the storm and the weather is back to normal, driver reaction time speeds up and there are not likely to be so many accidents.

Withdrawal Buying Time: Army Chief

By GEORGE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON (WP) — Army Secretary Stanley Resor said in hearing testimony just released that withdrawing troops from Vietnam is designed to "buy some time in the United States."

His statement before the House defence appropriations subcommittee is the strongest official link yet made between the troop withdrawals and American impatience with the long Vietnam war.

"Time is running out on our side in Vietnam," Resor told the subcommittee Oct. 8 in a closed session. "Therefore, if we can just buy some time in the United States by those periodic, progressive withdrawals, and the American people can just shore up their patience and determination, I think we can bring this thing to a successful conclusion.

'FREE RIGHT'

"We will be able to gradually build the Vietnamese to where they can take over all of the significant operations," Resor continued, "and get themselves the free right to choose the kind of government that they want to have."

In the same vein General William Westmoreland told the subcommittee that public opinion in the United States "has been our Achilles heel, without any question."

Westmoreland commanded American forces in Vietnam from 1964 to mid '68 when he became army chief of staff. Resor has been running his part of the Vietnam war as secretary of the army since July, 1968.

EXPECT TOO MUCH

Turning to the tactics employed in the war, Westmoreland said "perhaps we expected too much from our constrained bombing program."

He said in the same breath that "we did not face up to the absolute essentiality of the mobilization of South Vietnamese manpower."

The South Vietnamese government from 1965 through early 1967, Westmoreland said, was not strong enough to impose a mobilization.

"The thing that really made the manpower mobilization a reality" to the South Vietnamese, "was the shock effect of the Tet Offensive. This was their Pearl Harbor."

The general said that while Tet was "a major setback" to public support to the war in the United States, "it was a blessing in disguise in Vietnam."

Poison Gas to Roll Across Washington

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — "About five shipments" of chemical warfare munitions, including poison gas, will be sent through Washington state in the next few weeks, Gov. Dan Evans learned Tuesday.

The report was made to Evans personally by undersecretary of the army Thaddeus Beal.

Beal told the governor that the munitions, including deadly nerve gas agents, are being withdrawn from Okinawa, shipped to Bangor Naval Ammunition Depot on Hood Canal, then sent by train to the army's Umatilla ordinance depot in northeast Oregon.

The shipments probably will start later this month, or possibly in Jaunary, and should be completed "by the spring of 1970," Beal informed Evans.

ECM Sets Deadline For British Talks

THE HAGUE (Reuters)—Common Market leaders have cleared the way for expansion of the six-nation community and also headed off a mushrooming internal squabble about farm policy.

Besides the major commitment to draw up by the end of next June their joint negotiating position on entry talks with Britain, the six nations made a series of vital decisions Tuesday for the completion and development of the community.

The first of these was the recognition that priority must be given to reaching a definitive regulation for financing agricultural policy by the end of this year, as required under the Treaty of Rome which founded the community.

This was a French demand, which has now been endorsed by the other five partners—West Germany, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxembourg.

But at West German insistence, the paragraph in the final communique on this point was followed by a reference to farm surplus control and the need to cut growing support costs.

The countries also affirmed their agreement gradually to transfer their income on customs duties and levies on imported goods to the community treasury to finance the farm policy.

At the same time, they stated their readiness to increase the powers of budgetary control of the European parliament, which until now has had purely consultative status.

ISSUE NOT SETTLED

However, France is still unwilling to agree to direct elections to the parliament, and Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann said the issue remains to be settled.

As the common market leaders returned home today, after the two-day session, there was also praise for the new French attitude on the future of Europe. The most significant development at the summit was the ample confirmation of the fresh attitude by French President Georges Pompidou and his new French government.

Dutch sources, formerly the most critical of French policies, said Pompidou expressed his readiness for talks with Britain in terms not used previously by a French leader in the 12-year existence of the community.

The communique stated the leaders' "common conviction that a Europe composed of national states which in spite of their different national characteristics are united in their essential interests . . . is indispensible if a mainspring of development, progress and culture, be preserved."

But tempering the euphoria, one highly qualified source warned that there would be considerable difficulties between the summit and the actual entry negotiations with Britain, Denmark, Norway and Ireland.

Turning to monetary questions, on which several members made concrete proposals during the discussions in The Hague's historic Hall of Knights, the community leaders called for steps toward the creation of an economic and monetary union. A plan for this should be worked out in 1970, the summit communique stated.

ONLY 36 PER CENT IN FAVOR

LONDON (AP) — The Daily Telegraph published a Gallup poll today indicating only 36 per cent of the British now favor joining the Common Market, a sharp change since Prime Minister Macmillan first knocked on the door and was turned away in 1961.

Major factors in the change of opinion appeared to be the country's recent economic improvement, which boosted confidence that Britain can make it without joining the continental nations, disenchantment with the repeated rejections and expectation of higher food prices because of French insistence that farm prices be kept up.

Those polled were asked if they approved of the government's application for membership. Forty-five per cent said no, 36 per cent said yes and 19 per cent were undecided.

Two years ago, 43 per cent were in favor, 40 per cent against and 17 per cent undecided.

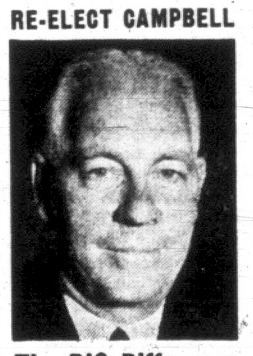

Not Even Speaker Ready For Speech

LONDON (UPI) Thirty-two-year-old Michael Coney reached the low point in his campaign for a Parliament seat in a British byelection. He was scheduled to make a speech but no one showed up to listen. "I was half an hour late myself anyway," said Coney, an independent candidate.

A Mayor for Victoria

IT IS NOT OFTEN THAT VICtoria has four candidates in a mayoralty contest, and the current campaign which will come to a climax next Saturday offers voters a wide range of preference. Because the approaches and policies of Mr. Baird, Mr. Haddock and Mr. Stewart differ in some significant details, it is important that voters have a clear idea of what they want the next mayor to accomplish, and then choose the man they believe best able to accomplish that purpose. Mr. Scott's candidacy is more in the nature of a token gesture.

Victoria is in the fortunate position of having had a succession of very able men during the past few years. To go back only as far as Mayor Scurrah, it has been obvious that a new spirit of progressiveness, a new concept of the city as a thriving element in Canada's evolving era on the Pacific Coast, has emerged.

* * *

It took able leadership to rouse Victoria from an extended period of quiescence — perhaps stagnation would be a truer word. With the advent of Mr. Wilson, the city took an important step ahead from the basis laid by Mr. Scurrah. During this period we saw the development of city squares, parking buildings and plans for pedestrian malls which would rehabilitate the downtown business core. The momentum was preserved by Mayor Toone, long a worker for the Rose-Blanshard program, before his tragic death in office. Mayor Stephen continued the pace and stepped it up with a still broader view of Victoria's potential for the future, and strong support for the dramatic Wharf Street rehabilitation plan which eventually will re-create much of the city's harbor-front.

The dominant theme of these civic leaders was the forward look, the willingness to break with the past where necessary and launch out on exciting new concepts. Wherever possible the city's history has been preserved in buildings and functions; but the ability to plan ahead, to think in terms of ordered change, to greet proposed innovation as a possible opportunity rather than a looming threat, has emerged as one of the most necessary qualities to be sought in any man leading Victoria's administration today and tomorrow.

But another essential element has been added to the task of the mayoralty in the last few years — one which is new in the city's experience. This is the current trend toward increasing area co-operation, and integration of the work of the local municipalities. Partly arising from the obvious necessity imposed by growth, and partly from the strong pressure of provincial authorities, the regional concept has become a major factor in the municipal life of this area as of many others. In rapid succession, various governmental functions which overlap the traditional municipal boundaries have been taken over by a joint regional authority representing the districts involved, and this movement will obviously be extended and intensified in the future.

It follows, therefore, that a successful mayor of Victoria must be regionally-minded, he must be actively sympathetic to increasing participation in the affairs of the whole region, he must be not only willing but eager to construct his policies on a basis wider than those of the city's boundaries. To fail in this regard would mean that the spirit of the times had been misinterpreted, the structural needs of this evolving community misunderstood.

* * *

The major candidates are men of repute and prominence, their public services to the community well known, their individual concern for the city's welfare evident. But in view of the vital need to preserve and foster the present well-established civic impetus, to continue the current and the yet-to-be-devised development programs, to reach out constructively to the new concept of co-operative regional government, one candidate has a recognizable advantage.

On the basis of his record as an alderman, as an active participant in development programs, as a leading figure in the new regional approach to community problems, and as a public official who has demonstrated his ability to work in constructive harmony with his own and other councils, Mr. Ian Stewart emerges as the best choice for mayor of Victoria.

The Film Gap

IT IS IRONIC THAT MANY FILM productions which attract adolescent interest are restricted to persons over 18 years of age. In recent weeks there has been a number of examples in Victoria. "Alice's Restaurant," "Medium Cool" and "Last Summer" all carried the restricted rating. Another film for and about youth, "Easy Rider," is recommended for adults but younger persons are admitted. The height of this kind of thinking occurred last year in Ontario where a film titled simply "17" was restricted to persons over 18.

There was more violence on television last Sunday night than in any of these films. People suffered bullets, beatings and burnings. The movies, however, featured explicit sex scenes and a few four-letter words. The CBC program "Weekend" also aired a few profane adjectives last Sunday.

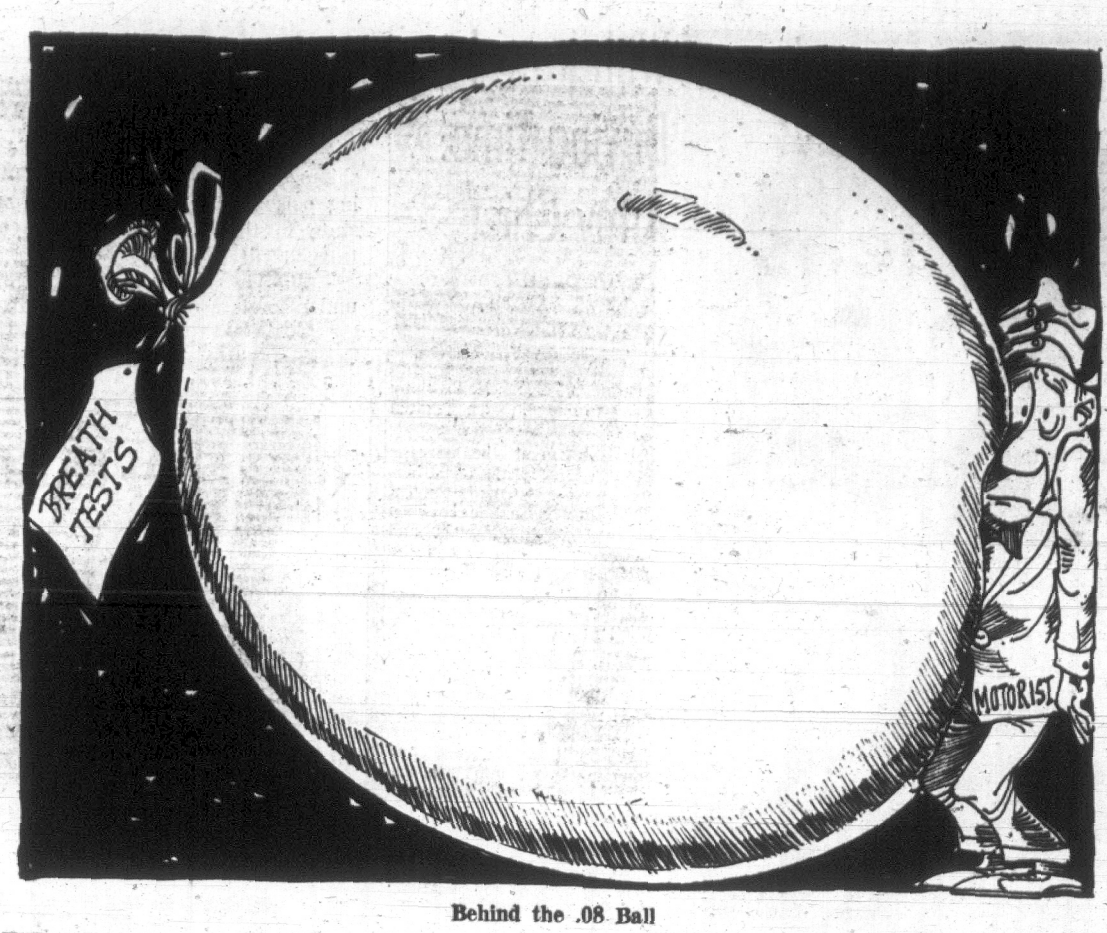

If the two media are to be treated equally, programs such as "Weekend" should carry the same caution as films: "Warning—parts of the dialogue could offend you—R. W. McDonald, B.C. Censor."

Sex seems to be the most sensitive issue in film censorship. But the adolescents appear to know more about the subject than the older generation, judging from the films about youth. In some parts of Canada sex education is part of the curriculum. Shocking as it may be to many persons, the average 14-year-old today is extremely well informed about his or her generation, and about sex. Keeping adolescents out of films that are about adolescents is a good example of how the myth of a generation gap becomes a reality.

Give Buyers More Choice

BRITISH COLUMBIA DRINKERS will take little comfort from the news that British Columbia alcoholic products are given preference in government liquor stores over Canadian, Commonwealth and foreign beverages. There is nothing wrong in aiding local industry, but to do so at the expense of other brands, equally good and sometimes better, is questionable. It is important that the consumer enjoy the largest choice possible when one retailer, in this case the British Columbia government, has a monopoly of all liquor outlets.

Using the Liquor Board logic it would follow that all the best brands of alcoholic beverages are produced right here in British Columbia; therefore they should be given preference. Nobody seems to have thought of the consumer. Since the Liquor Board reported a $50-millions profit last year it could afford to widen the choice, especially among imported wines. Improvements in the province's liquor laws, now under consideration, should have this one near the top of the list.

SUPERSEDING THE MARKET LAW

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

'Technostructure' Calls the Tune

SOME months ago, when Professor John Kenneth Galbraith proposed direct price and wage controls to cure inflation, his critics supposed that he was merely reviving an apparatus workable in wartime and unworkable in peacetime. But there was much more to it than that and all of us had better understand it. In fact, the American economist and philosopher has recognized, as business and labor leaders usually do not, that the entire continental economic system is being twisted and wrenched by a new process which the text-books overlook and government has yet to grasp.

Hutchison

As described in Professor Galbraith's recent speech, this process is a kind of quiet, internal explosion within the heartland of the system, and explosion hurling its debris, so to speak, at the perimeter where most of us live. One of the natural results is the many-sided thing we call inflation and the major casualty is the average citizen.

Perhaps because he is a nostalgic native son of Canada, Mr. Galbraith revealed the latest stage of his thinking in Ottawa. Unfortunately his speech was lost for the moment in the rush of less significant matters. But anyone who reads the full text must see at once that its contents will not perish from this early neglect. In due time the facts will compel us to face them.

Galbraith Summary

If I may attempt a brief, crude summary, Mr. Galbraith begins by reiterating certain facts already isolated in his famous books. Among them is the fact that the owners of the truly big industries have lost effective control of their property. A few of the shareholders may meet now and then in a pathetic, ceremonial fashion, but they make no vital decisions.

Ostensibly the decisions are made by the directors, but this, too, is largely a fiction. The real control of such economic empires has passed from the owners, the directors and even the so-called managers to what Mr. Galbraith calls the "technostructure." That is to say, the corps of experts who alone can design and market, for example, a new airplane, automobile or computer. Before the arcane technical knowledge of these specialists, the managers, being laymen, have become almost powerless in determining products, wages and prices.

So far this theory is familiar to Mr. Galbraith's readers. Now he goes on to argue that the giant corporations of America not only arrange their prices pretty much as they please in disregard of the theoretically competitive market but that they no longer seriously resist the demands of their labor unions. In short, the technostructure and the unions share a common interest in maximizing their own rewards both of money and, more important, of power.

Sham Battles

Hence they may conduct public sham battles, but in truth they live in cosy symbiosis and are little concerned with the rewards of the shareholders or the price paid by the general consumers. And having taken good care of themselves, in salaries, wages and prestige, they hand on the ever-rising cost of production to the public.

This explosion from the heartland, says the professor, may terribly damage the community. It may violate the declared policy of the government (as is happening in Canada today). Nevertheless, it continually exports the problems of the giants to the rest of the economy which, lacking comparative power, cannot resist the shock waves.

To be sure, the state tries to resist them by deflationary budget surpluses, harsh monetary policies, brutal interest rates, high taxes and the whole arsenal of orthodox weapons. In the professor's opinion these old indirect restraints no longer work in a modern economy. The belief that they can ever work against the giants, he says, is "the most unforgivable error in the present generation of American economists," a "theological" error, a refusal to admit "the decline of the market."

Therefore, "until we agree on substituting some mechanism of public determination of wages and prices — which I do not think need be very complicated — for unhampered determination by corporations and unions, the strongest parts of the economy will continue to export their tensions to the weakest." The ordinary citizen, lacking power himself, will pay the price of the power exercised by the giants.

Of course I am not competent to judge whether the professor has exaggerated that power, or whether he is right in recommending direct state intervention in the giants' affairs to protect the many smaller business concerns and the unorganized majority of the people. I believe, however, as I ventured to suggest when the argument began in the early autumn, that the Canadian government will have to look hard at the Galbraithian theorems before it is finished. For clearly it is not succeeding with its orthodox methods, the explosion from the heartland persists and some day, somehow, the public will certainly preserve itself from a new form of power outside its present control and even its understanding.

To take the most recent examples, the Canadian steel industry has quickly exported its new wage costs to the consumer in the form of price increases. The nickel industry has exported far higher prices to the world and domestic markets. On a smaller scale the paper industry is doing the same thing. Other industries will follow as soon and as far as they can.

Cost of Gain

Thus we earn some extra foreign currency, a valuable gain, but at the expense of inflating the economy and penalizing the poor, the weak and the unorganized, the vast majority of the nation.

Anyway, for Prime Minister Trudeau, as he dreams ten years ahead into the ultimate perfections of the Just Society, the Galbraith speech should be must reading. But it contains an even more striking idea than the explosion from the heartland which I shall try to explain at another time.

Letters to the Editor

That "Blood Bath"

Nasser has not made any statement advocating, or creating, a blood-bath in the Middle-East.

What he did state in reference to a blood-bath was, in essence, that he saw no end to the blood-bath, and the reason that he gave was that Israel refuses to abide by any of the several votes taken in the General Assembly of the United Nations, which has consistently condemned Israel, with outstanding or overwhelming average vote of 100 to 1, with 6 abstentions.

There can not be a majority of people, or representatives of the people wrong, or misinformed, leaving only one nation, and its people and representatives, both correct and correctly informed.—Wayne S. Huff, 831 Villance.

Through the UN

Mitchell Sharp's statement in the Commons on November 19 respecting his visit to the Middle East was a glum one. The minister returned with a profound sense of disquiet, saddened and discouraged by what he saw.

His remarks contained a reference to the United Nations which is reassuring at least so far as Canadian policy is concerned. Canada's policy finds expression, he said, largely through the United Nations.

Which is as it should be. Firm adherence to the UN's position is desirable not only to help bolster the prestige of the world organization but, more important, to try to get the protagonists themselves to accept and abide by UN resolutions. The latter course offers the best hope for peace.

Ironically, one of the protagonists, which is itself a creature of the UN, and thus might be expected to be a loyal subject, has in fact the worst possible record in this regard. Indeed, that state's present insistence on direct talks with Arabs on the question of the occupied territories—to be conducted outside the ambit of the UN—is typical of its disdainful attitude over the years.—L. Ryan, 70 Linden

Good Example

I would like to stress the good example the city's retiring mayor set.

When the balance of the council voted to increase his salary from $10,000 to $15,000 the mayor turned down the idea, saying he did not need it.

What an example to set in this inflationary period. — Harry Wyer, 234 Vancouver.

Heartfelt Gratitude

May we express heartfelt thanks to our many kind and thoughtful friends who so willingly gave us their loving help and moral support after our recent fire? We also wish to thank the Oak Bay fire department and police for the fast and efficient way in which they handled the entire situation.—Bruce and Pauline Blay and family, 2748 Dunlevy.

"The Canadian-Australian liner Makura (Capt. E. Gibbs) is to be equipped with wireless apparatus, says J. C. Irons, agent for the line. It will be in operation by the time the Makura sails for Sydney on Dec. 5. The system employed will be the United Wireless, which is used by most steamers today. The Makura will be fitted with a five-kilowatt transmitter—the most powerful on this coast.

NATO

Collapse Or Change

By DAVID HUMPHREYS from London

ACCORDING to a report in The Times, Sir Walter Walker, commander-in-chief of Allied forces in Northern Europe, said in an interview for television that NATO's security was jeopardized by the apathy of politicians. He was concerned that NATO would eventually collapse as countries withdrew support as a result of complacency.

NATO has withdrawn permission for British television to show the interview, the report says, for security reasons. But there are suggestions that the real cause may be more political.

The veracity of this report is supported by the malaise of spirit evident for some time among NATO members, including Canada. As the alliance moves through its 21st year there is doubt and anxiety about its future.

Conventional troops played an essential part of the success of NATO's first 20 years in deterring the threat of aggression in Europe. But now conventional troop strength is threatened by lack of faith in their effectiveness. Canada, withdrawing 5,000 men, has the dubious distinction of being the leader in the field.

The Americans are talking about redressing the imbalance of burden. The French are out and likely to stay out for some time. The British have faith in the system but lack financial power. Troops of other countries are less than adequately trained for the most part.

Britain has made an offer to Bonn which would have the effect of maintaining troop strength at present levels in Central Europe after the Canadian brigade leaves. A British brigade withdrawn at the time of devaluation would be returned to the British Army of the Rhine, if Bonn would make Britain a satisfactory offer to offset the drain on Britain's balance of payments.

No Over-all Increase

This offer would result in a change in position but no overall increase in NATO strength since the brigade remained on NATO duty in Britain. The British government does not expect any early decision and regards the situation as somewhat hypothetical.

Without adequate conventional forces the alliance's strategy must rest on tactical nuclear weapons. A policy for such a strategy is being hammered out in NATO meetings this year. Hopefully, a policy will emerge next year. Some believe that any war in Europe will be nuclear; therefore conventional forces are not important. Others believe that there is no use trying to strengthen forces already hopelessly below strength. The jolt of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia is fading rapidly, but it remains as an example of the type of political aggression far more likely to be made against a Western country than a nuclear war.

The dilemma was examined in a sober, constructive article from the American point of view in the October edition of Foreign Affairs, an American quarterly. The authors were Alain C. Enthoven who was deputy secretary for systems analysis in the defence department between 1960 and 1969, and K. Wayne Smith of the Rand corporation.

They deal with the problem of troop strength and the larger issue of reshaping the alliance. Here is the core of their argument:

"The Europeans are not contributing to the alliance what their prosperous economies would easily allow them to do. Even the conventional forces they do maintain are often poorly equipped, trained and supported. And despite U.S. efforts, the Europeans have done little to improve these forces.

Their solution was to confront the Europeans with a new plan, providing fewer, but still substantial, American forces, greater European forces and control over the alliance.

Close to Healey Concept

This is all mere theory now but is not too far from the realm of possibility to be of more than academic interest. It is also close to the European concepts already advanced by the British defence minister, Dennis Healey, and accepted by the new West German defence minister, Helmut Schmidt.

Under the Healey plan, European contributions would increase as the American forces are reduced to produce a "more European identity." The concept would suit the French, who for some time have believed that the Americans will withdraw more troops from Europe. The possibility then arises of renewed Anglo-French co-operation, although at the moment the British insist that it would have to be in the context of NATO and the French are unwilling to rejoin the NATO military framework.

If the Schmidt thesis is accepted, a decisive policy for conventional forces becomes an urgent European necessity. In a recent article he explained the thinking behind his willingness to co-operate with Mr. Healey; The Brezhnev doctrine of intervention, as practised in Czechoslovakia, is not dead.

"Brezhnev is well on the road to a foreign policy that will be remade in Stalin's image, in which the whole of Europe will be under the direct influence of the Soviets . . . The necessity remains to offer the Soviet urge to expand no gap or opening: Both before and after the Brezhnev doctrine, this is the key strategic task of the Western alliance."

Coming as it does from a minister in an administration pledged to do whatever it can to improve relations with the East, and after his careful analysis including an exploratory mission to Moscow, this statement must make sobering reading for all NATO ministers.

'A New Science With New Ideas'

Molecular biology is a new science with new ideas.

Traditionally, the biologist observed living things as wholes of some kind. Later, the biochemist became interested in how the molecules of living things behaved in the test tube.

Today, the molecular biologist synthesizes these two approaches in order to describe vital processes in terms of macromolecules, the large, highly complex molecules which are the nuts and bolts of cell components.

In the wake of rapid progress in this burgeoning field, scientists are focussing their attention on it in increasing numbers.

Synthesis of Genes

At the National Research Council of Canada, scientists in the Council's Biochemistry Laboratory have embarked on a project dealing with one of the most challenging aspects of molecular biology — the synthesis of genes, the transmitters of hereditary characteristics.

Specifically, under the direction of Dr. S. A. Narang, work has been undertaken to synthesize DNA molecules, which it is hoped, eventually will lead to the synthesis, outside the cell, of a key protein used in controlling diabetes — insulin.

The blue eyes of the Scandinavian, the dark eyes of the North African, the flaming hair of the Irish, the white hair of the albino, all physical characteristics, and indeed most mental ones, are a matter of heredity, that is, of the transfer of DNA (deoxyribose nucleic acid) from one generation to another.

This long-chained acid, in the form of a double helix, is the starting-point for the synthesis of proteins, ubiquitous jacks-of-all-trades in the body. It is protein which makes the cells of living organisms what they are.

50,000 Varieties

Each of the 100 billion cells in the human body may contain more than 1¼ million proteins in 50,000 different varieties — nearly one-half the dry weight of the human body.

DNA acts like a master computer for the manufacture, in the cell, of each protein. And, thanks to its programmed instructions, a cow reproduces a calf and not some other kind of animal, and a heart cell reproduces a heart cell and not a kidney cell.

Disclosure last week that researchers at Harvard University have succeeded in isolating a gene focussed attention on the work that is proceeding in this field. The National Research Council of Canada is in the forefront of this research and some aspects of its projects are outlined in this article taken from the latest issue of its publication Science Dimension.

Just like proteins, whose long chain-like structures in general are composed of only twenty basic building blocks (called amino acids), DNA is also made up of sub-units, four in number, called "nucleotides".

With both protein and DNA, the order of these building blocks is of prime importance.

For proteins, the sequence of the sub-units and the resulting shape of the whole molecule govern their biochemical characteristics; for DNA, the specific order in which the four nucleotides are arranged forms code words capable of carrying the information needed for the synthesis of proteins.

Coded Instructions

How proteins are formed in accordance with these coded instructions constitutes one of the most exciting and significant chapters in the history of modern science.

Even at the early stages which scientists have presently attained, the magnitude of their achivements has been recognized at every major step with Nobel prizes for the elucidation of the structure of DNA, for the analysis of the structure and amino acid sequence of the protein insulin, and, most recently, for the cracking of the genetic code.

Since the deciphering of the genetic code, some chemists and molecular biologists have turned their interest and insights to the problem of synthesizing certain proteins in the same rapid and efficient manner that all living cells do.

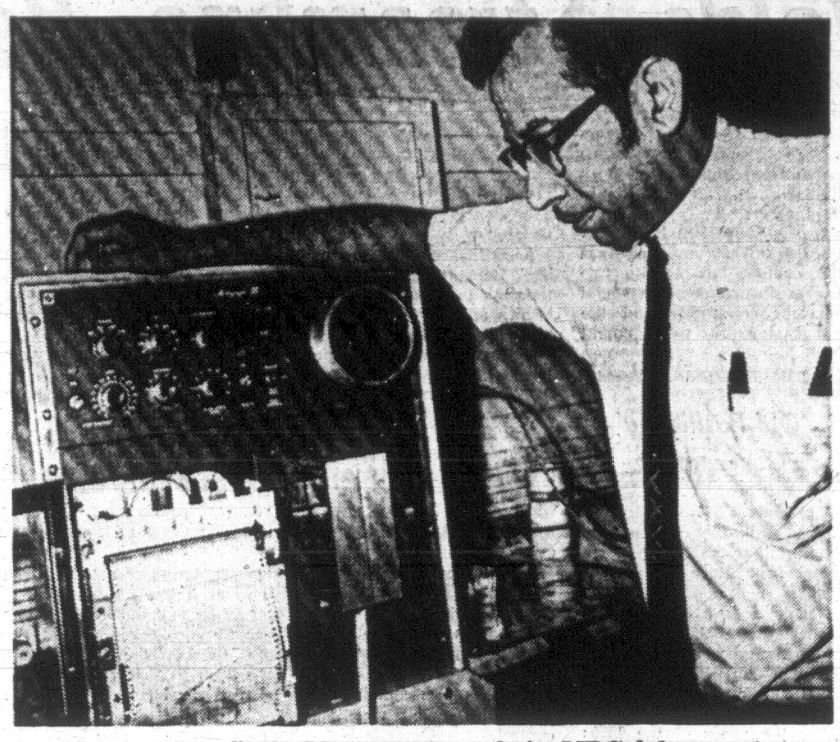

Knowing, on the one hand, the amino acid sequence of the desired protein, and on the other, the genetic code by means of which this sequence can be traced back to the corresponding "code words" in DNA, these scientists have begun synthesizing short DNA molecules containing the information for specific amino acid sequences.

The Biochemistry Laboratory's program to synthesize the specific sequence of DNA that contains the coded information for bovine insulin has a dual purpose: first, it will contribute to the elaboration of new methods in protein biosynthesis; second, if his synthetic DNA can, with the help of enzymes, be duplicated in the test tube, then it might herald the design and synthesis of other genetically vital substances, and the techniques whereby living organisms will benefit from these new determinants.

Under Dr. Narang's direction, the first phase of the program at the Council has been successfully concluded.

A new methodology has been developed for the synthesis of short, well-defined chains of polynucleotides (a generic name for both DNA and a closely related nucleic acid, RNA).

Work is currently under way on the next phase of the project; increasing the chain lengths of these synthetic fragments by enzymatic, rather than by purely chemical means.

Dr. S. A. Narang at work in NRC lab.

In addition to the theoretical significance of these studies, the experimental techniques employed have proven a special boon to chemists. For example, until now, scientists had two fundamental methods for building up fragments of the DNA molecule:

1. Stepwise condensation, a laborious unit-by-unit synthesis of a fragment with the proviso that the product be separated from the reactants after every one of the condensations;

2. Polymerization, a process enabling several identical units to be linked together in a chain at one time. However, a chain cannot be "made to order" and separation of the diverse chains obtained poses a considerable problem.

A much more elegant approach has been developed by Dr. Narang. It has been known for some time that the basic units of polynucleotide chains, the nucleotides, have, as it were, a definite top and bottom.

Since it is only possible to link the top of one nucleotide to the bottom of another, any polynucleotide will have a definite top and bottom.

Making use of this fact, Dr. Narang employed a method of protecting the top of one reactant and the bottom of the other, thus ensuring that only the desired combination of the two would result from a reaction. Since the protecting groups can be attached and removed at will, the method not only provides a means of producing well-defined sequences of different bases, but the chains can be protected in such a way that they may be extended in either direction.

Perhaps the greatest asset of this method is that it allows the products to be double the length of the reactants each time the fragments are coupled. The name of the process, "fragment coupling", reflects this feature.

What is the long-term objective of this work? It is the elaboration of the total mechanism involved in gene synthesis.

If this extremely valuable knowledge can be harnessed to serve mankind, then remarkable, indeed revolutionary advances may be forthcoming.

Man Can Fight Back

Scientists in this field the world over are aware that cures for diseases linked to a defective gene — cancer and leukemia among them — may be realized from their efforts.

These deadly diseases seem to be associated with defective segments of DNA, sections in which the sequence of nucleotides has been altered, and hence the sequence structure and biological activity of the related proteins undergo changes and are often rendered useless. But man can fight back.

Once the defective portion of the gene is known and corrected (scientists are already able to do this at the end portion of the DNA molecule) and the gene subsequently fosters cell replication, then this genetic engineering will provide a new medical technology by means of which man can make a more determined effort to improve his world.

Still Lots of Time To Weigh Implications

By ANTHONY TUCKER
Manchester Guardian Weekly

"There is no fear that the isolation of a group of genes by scientists at the Harvard Medical School is a first step in human genetic engineering. But it opens up a route to the isolation of other groups of bacterial genes and to the understanding of the exact nature of the mechanism controlling the synthesis of enzymes in the bacterial cell."

●

Enzymes are the catalysts on which the myriad processes of life depend, and this assessment of the American advance was made last week by Dr. Max Perutz, director of the British Medical Research Council's Molecular Biology Laboratory.

The Harvard work has led, in an elegant and precise way, to the isolation of a group of six genes' responsibility, in the bacterium, for endowing the ability to metabolise the sugar lactose.

The group, consisting of two strands of DNA wound helically like all genetic material, is roughly one thousandth of a millimetre long. It was isolated by combining from different organisms single strands of DNA whose only common element was the lactose metabolising group.

Since the group is complete, and the protein to regulate it is also isolated, a complete operating fragment of a bacterial genetic system is now available for study.

It comprises genes for three enzymes including those essential for control. Through manipulation of the controlling enzymes it will eventually be possible to unravel in precise detail how the system works.

●

This is of great importance because it leads towards an understanding of how, in more complex organisms, cells containing apparently identical genetic information developed different characteristics so that they perform highly specific structural or metabolic functions.

This "differentiation" process — highly relevant to an understanding of the malfunction which leads, for example, to cancer — is one of the central mysteries of biology.

A detailed theory of this control mechanism already exists for bacterial enzymes and so far the activity of the newly isolated group confirms the theory. But, as Dr Perutz pointed out, there is no evidence that bacterial and mammalian systems are alike.

●

But the more detailed our understanding of the workings of bacteria become the more precise can therapy become. The implications for medicine, if still remote, are very important.

There is, therefore, plenty of time to weigh up the implications and to take steps to ensure that adequate safeguards exist against the obvious sinister aspects of the knowledge — when this is finally gathered. The United States government has announced recently that it has abandoned its defence plan to attempt the production of synthetic protein agents against which, because they were entirely exotic, no defence could exist.

But there remains the Harvard team's warning that this new knowledge of gene function could itself be used for good or evil.

Extravehicular Adjectivity

By COLIN WEBB
The Times, London

You might think that a nation which paid $24 billion to put a man on the moon would devote some thought to getting the results across in an intelligible form. But listen to John E. McLeaish, Chief of the Public Information Office of NASA, relating an incident from Apollo 11:

" . . . some visibility degradation from blowing dust . . . but not in the framework of a serious problem."

Visibility degradation? Presumably they could not see as well. The mind boggles (or there is some cerebral demurration, perhaps). It is a typical example of the verbal appreciation gap which surrounded this incredible mission and still prevents one from knowing what it is actually like on the moon.

I am not carping about Neil Armstrong's "that's one small step for a man, a giant leap for mankind" — whoever wrote it. As someone has already remarked, a British astronaut would have stuck in a flag and said "I name this moon Elizabeth."

●

Nor do I quibble with Michael Collins, the poet of the crew, who chided Col. Frank Borman for his "fantastic, beautiful" phrases on the Apollo 8 mission.

Borman, who had promised to "stretch the vocabulary a bit" when he went to the moon at Christmas, and ended up lamely using those words, chided Collins immediately after splashdown: "In three minutes up there he used four fantastics and two beautifuls."

Who knows — Columbus might have exclaimed "fantastico, bello" when he conquered a new world.

I do not criticize the scientists who, as the world waited breathlessly to see what the moon was made of, announced that its rocks were "similar to the Giant's Causeway in Northern Ireland."

●

These men all need to define things scientifically, and I suppose they have good reasons for calling the lunar spacesuit the EMU (Extravehicular Mobility Unit) and the historic moonwalk the EVA (Extravehicular Activity.)

They must need their book "Apollo Acronyms and Abbreviations" of 1,500 entries ranging from AA (Acquisition Aid) through such gems as NOESTR (Network Operations Engineering Support Team Room) to ZNU (Z Space Fixed Position Navigational Update.)

What we are going to need though, if we are ever to begin to grasp just what the Apollo missions "means to man," is some Extravehicular Adjectivity, some real words that mean real things to the man-in-the-street paying for it all.

Ultimate Disguise

The Globe and Mail

The undercover man has at last found the ultimate disguise.

Once upon a time he slinked through skid road as a drug pusher. Or he grew a beard and joined a pot party. Of course he has always found it useful to be a Communist, or a member of the Mafia or a spy. Now he has reached the nadir of his art. He is a journalist.

A young teaching assistant at Simon Fraser University complains that he was harassed at the Liberal conference in Harrison Hot Springs by two men wearing press badges who turned out to be RCMP officers. How natural.

Surely in a country where the Prime Minister never reads a newspaper without "suspicion", police should be expected to pose as—ugh—journalists.

The fact that they do, however, should be noted by members of the Senate Committee on the Press. Watch out, the correspondent you kick may turn out to be a constable.

Maybe a Modification In Family Centennial Plans

By ART STOTT

"How," I asked the lady of the house, "do you propose to celebrate next year's centenary of British Columbia's entry into Confederation?"

"What's wrong," she countered, "with following the same program we adopted for the last three centennials?"

"What do you mean?" I asked.

"Your memory's slipping," she replied. "You seem to have forgotten the windy speeches you made on those other occasions. As you phrased it, it was the right and privilege of every Canadian to express his Canadianism doing his own thing, so long as it was tied to the Canadian ethos. You loved that word "ethos" and no doubt some day you'll find out what it means. Anyhow, your argument ran, the thing about Canada as you saw it was the unfettered freedom the country allowed its people. You can get a debate on that, but this was your theme. It wasn't necessary for Canadians to prove their patriotism by joining great mobs of people to listen to their leaders, like the Nazis and Italian fascists did, or like we did for Mr. Trudeau at Beacon Hill Park. No, cross out that Trudeau reference. It's in the wrong context.

"A Canadian could be as Canadian as a maple leaf, you said, all by himself. Canadianism was a state of mind, a philosophy and it could be as magnificent as eastern Canadian maple leaves in autumn — which you've never seen.

"Let those who wanted to wave flags or join parades wave and join as they wished. You'd nourish your national spirit and pride quietly in the environment you considered most appropriate.

"So we concentrated our observation during the hot days of summer, packed our lawn furniture, both pieces, down to the little clearing above the beach at Cigarmakers' Bay and stretched out on our chaise longues to absorb Canadianism by osmosis under the blazing sun, near the towering cedars and pines beside the lapping waters. I'm quoting those bromides. You overdid it, of course, and burned so badly you couldn't sleep at night. Still, you thought the discomfort a small price to pay for your contemplative gesture honoring the spirit of the occasion. Funny how heavily you breathe and how relaxed you are, with your eyes closed, when you undertake these contemplative gestures."

"Yes," I agreed, "it was a noble observation, worth the price it exacted in pain. But this time Lawrie wants us to get involved. He points out that if everyone followed the course of quiet contemplation, enriching as it might be for the individual, the whole centennial thing could slide along without anybody noticing it in a community sort of way. He'd like us to expand our effort somehow. I think he's right and an idea is germinating in my mind.

★ ★ ★

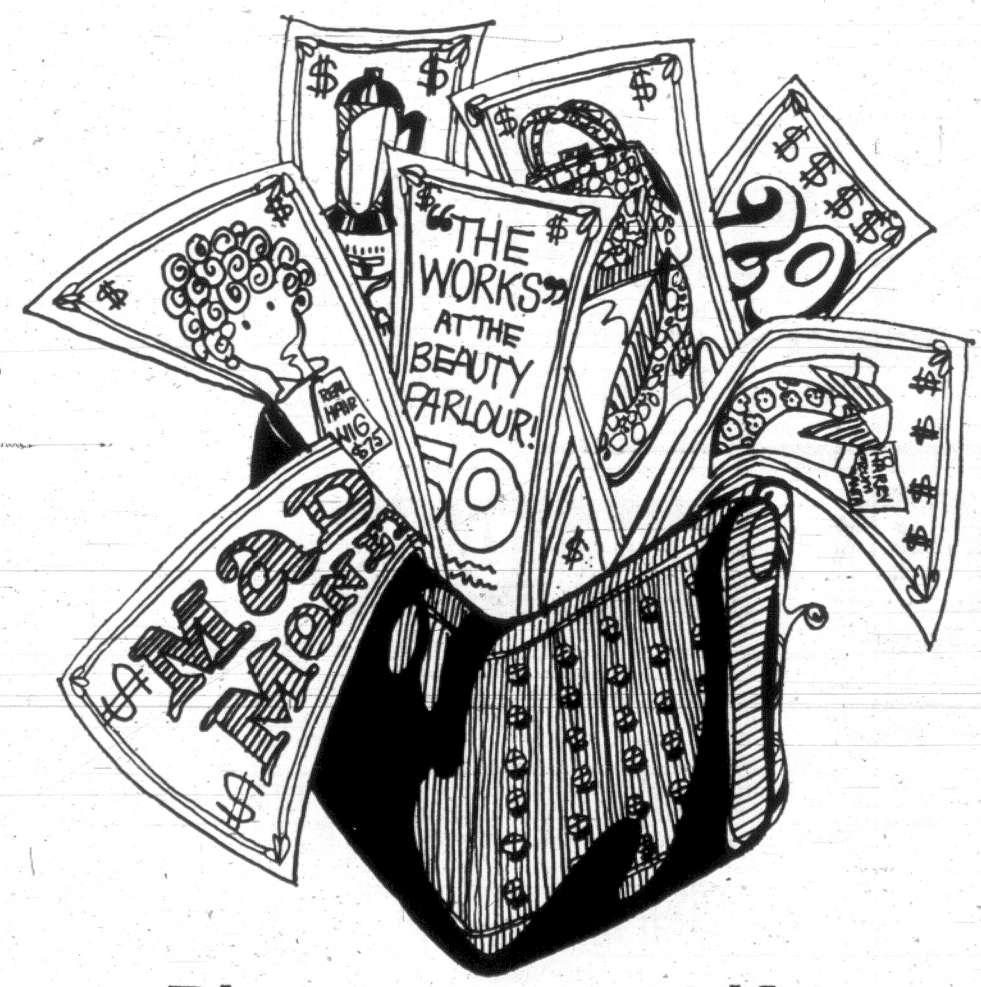

"Not that we need to abandon our previous format entirely, but it could be broadened. We could have a seminar on Canada down by the lake. We might even buy another chaise longue and have it covered in white plastic with red maple leaves picked out in a national design. You could work some cushions in the 1970 centennial motif. It's an attractive symbol, three gold stylized 'C's, with extended arms that give them some of the appearance of horseshoes in a cloverleaf, the backs of the C's rosetted together with British Columbia dogwood emblem. They'd add to the comfort as well as the carnival appearance of the chaise longues or chaises longues.

"Then we might be able to inveigle Bruce to come down and lecture on Canadian history. He's pretty good at it and we could explain that the speedboats and water skiers don't make as much noise where the lake broadens out in Cigarmakers' Bay, as they do at his place. The thing has possibilities. It needn't be a very big seminar, but, if we pulled a few strings, we might get official recognition for it — maybe a grant at least to cover the costs of medication for the throats of speakers."

★ ★ ★

"There's a certain cupidity in your planning," the lady of the house remarked. "I don't think that's exactly what Lawrie has in mind. He'd be more interested, I think, in some selfless expenditure of your own energies and your own resources in a project of common good for all — something that would lead to the enjoyment and education of a larger number of people, at least a larger number than you and me and one or two personal friends. I think you'd better germinate another idea — and quick. It's later than you think for centennial planning."

I thanked the lady of the house and told her the project probably needed more than my solitary pondering. I shall strike a committee or appoint a task force. But our celebration, it seems to me, should still have something to do with chaises longues, centennially decorated cushions and hot weather by the lake.

Bennett Holds 'Streamline' Reins

By BRUCE YEMEN

British Columbia's cabinet ministers are involved in what appears to be a serious exercise in public administration aimed at streamlining governmental structure to meet the needs of the 1970s and 1980s.

And work towards changing the shape of provincial government is impressive activity in a government often accused of practising only narcissism when it looked at itself in the past.

But to expect more than a cautious approach to modernizing the government would be unrealistic. It will probably be a slow process.

Premier Bennett's phenomenal success at running an "old-fashioned" government is bound to be a factor in any changes he might approve.

Bennett's deep-rooted beliefs about government and politics may prove to be obstacles to bringing about a transformation of the structure of government.

But Bennett is officially behind the new studies which are being carried out by cabinet committees.

The first public indication that the government is concerned about its structure came from Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell in September.

He told municipal officials at a Kamloops meeting that the cabinet has set up two major committees—the social services committee and the environmental management committee—to co-ordinate policies in those two broad areas.

'Old-Fashioned' Government

"It is a fact that government departments have grown up historically in nice compartments in which they continue to work," Campbell said.

"In the years of the 1970s and 80s that system will not work. You cannot work in nice little compartments if you are going to take a look at the total environment."

Pollution is one of the problems that illustrates what Campbell had in mind.

Municipalities have grown tired and confused from hearing conflicting policies on pollution control from separate compartments within the government—the Pollution Control Board and the health department in particular.

Campbell's announcement of an organizational study may have been timed to mollify the municipalities.

Two Major Committees

Asked about it a few days later, Bennett said flatly that the government planned no departmental changes except that which would bring Minister Without Portfolio Phil Gaglardi back to full minister status.

When Gaglardi was handed the Social Welfare portfolio last month, Bennett said no further changes were planned "at this time" and added: "As you know, we have a number of cabinet committees."

The Gaglardi appointment was clearly based on political expediency and involved no departmental re-organization.

The success that Bennett has achieved in running the government his way is not something he would lightly risk losing, observers feel.

Timed to Mollify Municipalities

Bennett's style is based on the traditional conception of government as the art of responding to the right pressures at the right time.

The pressures come from both within the government from the various departments and agencies and from without in the form of public opinion and the representations of interest groups.

There is some evidence for the view that Bennett sees himself as a finance minister first and premier second. He appears in his strongest role as keeper of the purse strings.

A skilled finance minister like Bennett can use fragmentation of policy responsibilities among departments to assist cost control.

If there are five departments seeking an increase in pollution control budgets, there are five that can be told they must be modest in their demands because so many must share the available money.

But an even more fundamental control is achieved through fragmentation because it can effectively prevent the making of creative over-all policy by the departments. This is a useful device for a government that seeks, for one reason or another, to avoid taking a major initiative in a field such as pollution control.

Major initiatives usually cost more money than a policy of simply giving in here and there to political pressures.

Useful Device To Avoid Decisions

Education, for instance, has long been recognized as an area requiring its own department of government with the means to make creative policy.

Pollution, on the other hand, has not yet been recognized as a matter deserving a new kind of government organization capable of dealing with the problem.

The new cabinet committee on environmental management will initially seek to co-ordinate the separate agencies which deal with pollution. These include the departments of health, municipal affairs, water resources, mines and the Pollution Control Board.

Co-ordinate Agencies

Similarly, the social services committee will be in a position to help draw together the various aspects of welfare policy being handled by a number of departments and agencies.

But these are only stopgap measures, as Campbell hinted, and a full-scale restructuring of departments will be required.

Bennett's skill in managing the purse strings within the bureaucracy is matched by his skill in responding to pressures from outside the government.

He has so far been able to handle the mounting public concern about pollution by publicizing at a key time—during the election campaign and largely at public expense—what various government agencies are doing about pollution.

At the same time, however, the government has been subtly using the fragmentation of responsibility to back up its contention that pollution is "much too complex a subject" to rush into without adequate scientific knowledge.

Bennett is good at this essentially negative kind of government which has its strength in over-all cost control and its weakness in comprehensive policy making.

There are exceptions to this negative approach, of course. The two that leap to mind are highway construction and hydro power development in which the Bennett government was notably creative.

It is the subtle pervasive and modern issues that Campbell is referring to when he says the government will have to be re-shaped to meet the needs of the next two decades.

Precisely what shape a new governmental structure might take is difficult to predict. It could be affected by results of continuing constitutional talks on the division of powers between Ottawa and the provinces, for instance.

Must Re-shape To Meet Needs

Bennett's record indicates that he would favor any changes leading to improved internal efficiency in provincial government.

The test for him will be whether the changes are equally directed at fitting the provincial government to play a stronger role not only in dealing with problems that become political issues, but also in anticipating and preventing them from happening.

A strong case can be made for the creative style of government being, in the long run, the cheapest because prevention, generally speaking, is cheaper than the cure.

The question of re-organizing government is thus a test of Mr. Bennett's foresight, a quality he has demonstrated in the building of highways and hydro dams in the 1950s and 1960s.

Because of the magnitude of new problems facing government, he may already realize that he has only two real alternatives: change the shape of government or change its leader.

He may also realize that the maximum political advantage for the Social Credit Party will be gained by allowing both those events to take place at the same time, with the new leader getting the benefit of most of the "new look" publicity.

And that would make the work of the cabinet committees not only an exercise in public administration—which is politics in a broad sense—but also a strategy of politics in the narrower sense.

Bonn-Washington Friendship 'Needs No Reassurance'

By DAN MORGAN
The Washington Post

BONN, — For 20 years the Americans have been reassuring the West Germans about almost every step they have taken in foreign policy, but the signs are pointing strongly to a reversal of roles this week.

According to some West German officials, the visit of Secretary of State William P. Rogers here Friday and Saturday will be dedicated to removing certain U.S. worries about Bonn's recent moves in east Europe.

TACTICAL ERRORS

Though the U.S. wholeheartedly supports all practical steps being taken by Chancellor Willy Brandt to remove tensions with the Communists, officials of both countries concede that consultation has grown ragged in the past weeks.

American officials complain, for instance, that "tactical errors" may have been made by the Brandt government in timing the moves to the east. U.S. officials readily express some worry that the new regime here will get ahead of Washington.

For the post-war period of its nuclear-backed stewardship in West German, the U.S. has become accustomed to being consulted on all foreign policy steps taken by the government here.

But this was not done in the case of Bonn's Nov. 24 proposal to Moscow for talks on a renunciation of force agreement.

West German officials have also said that there was little or no co-ordination with the allies prior to the new socialist government's shift in its position toward East Germany. The new formula for this inter-German relationship is that there are two German states, one Communist, one capitalist, co-existing within an undefined "German nation."

LEGAL PROBLEMS

Though the formula stops short of sovereign recognition for East Germany, officials of both the U.S. and West Germany now concede that it may raise some legal problems. The main one is the future position of East Germany in international organizations. By virtue of its non-recognition by the West, East Germany has always been excluded, but the admission by the Brandt regime that it is a state may make this more difficult, western sources contend.

Another hypothetical legal problem mentioned by Germans here is the status of Berlin under the new formula. The city is legally under four-power rule; but half of it — East Berlin — is the capital of a state whose existence, though not its sovereignty, is now recognized by Bonn.

The Brandt team, which is pursuing a cautious and unillusionistic line in moving toward talks with Moscow, Poland and eventually East Berlin, is therefore anxious to use this week's NATO foreign ministers' meeting in Brussels, and the subsequent talks here between Rogers, Chancellor Brandt and Foreign Minister Walter Schell, to clarify its eastern policy.

There is understanding for Washington's preoccupation with Vietnam and domestic problems, and a feeling that this factor may have diverted attention from the Brandt government's goals.

In his Oct. 28 inaugural speech Brandt said that his government would not be seeking continuous reassurance from countries it considered its friends, and did not expect they would need it either.

At the same time Bonn wants to link its forthcoming talks with the Russians, which the Germans have proposed for Dec. 8 in Mosocw, with separate four-power talks on Berlin.

Though an agenda for western allies discussions with the Soviets is not final, the U.S. wants to discuss some form of access guarantees between the isolated city and West Germany, as well as ways of increasing the city's role as centre for east-west trade.

The allies are leaning to holding the talks in Berlin, but West Germany is anxious for them to take place in Moscow to emphasize the connection with its separate bilateral discussions there on a non-aggression treaty.

The forthcoming overtures on Berlin date back to President Nixon's visit to Bonn in February, when he agreed to make Soviet readiness to seek a better deal for Berlin a test of Moscow's sincerity in eliminating world points of tension.

In August, the western three formally proposed talks on Berlin access, and added that Moscow should also try to encourage East Germany to particapte in an inter-German dialogue with Bonn.

In its reply Sept. 12, Moscow kept the idea of talks alive and did not directly rebuff the suggestion of promoting talks between the two Germanys.

However, it is unclear now how far Moscow intends to go in allowing any of its socialists allies to make separate deals with the Brandt government.

The Berlin question is even more complicated. According to West German sources who have been in contact with the Russians, the Soviets have made clear that they are willing to agree to a real improvement of the situation in and around the city immediately, if the west concedes its "independent," or neutral status.

West Berlin mayor Klaus Schuetz, a protege of Chancellor Brandt, has been moving cautiously in the direction of a more independent political role for the city.

SURREY (CP) — Joseph Butson, 44, of Surrey, was remanded to Dec. 8 on $2,000 bail Monday when he appeared in provincial court on a charge of theft of $4,000 of copper pipe from the municipality.

Beer-Peddling Proposal Denied by Barrister

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Vancouver lawyer told the provincial royal commission on liquor legislation Tuesday that he did not offer to help Prince George brewer Ben Ginter market his products for a $10,000 retainer.

At an earlier hearing Mr. Ginter charged that Arthur Fouks, administrator of the British Columbia Brewers' Institute, was the man he was told to see to get his beer marketed in the Kootenay region of the province.

●

"I categorically and unequivocally tell this commission that no such discussion took place with me," Mr. Fouks said of Mr. Ginter's charge.

He said Mr. Ginter arranged in 1967 for Mr. Fouks' office to act on behalf of a third party in the purchase of the assets of a bankrupt hotel, and that was the only time he had any dealings with him.

●

The B.C. Brewers' Institute represents Carling's, O'Keefe's, Molsons and Labatts breweries and acts as a self-policing agency to hold the breweries to a code of ethics, Mr. Fouks said.

In reply to questioning by Mr. Ginter, he said the institute has never tried to prevent competition among breweries and has never discussed anything with the provincial government, including price raises.

"By self-discipline don't you really mean that by virtue of your so-called code of ethics the members have formed a solid monopoly for the purpose of protecting their own interests against the public interest?" Mr. Ginter asked.

Mr. Fouks replied: "Absolutely not. A code of ethics rigidly enforced is in the public interest."

●

Members of the commission also questioned William Bruce, acting chairman of the Liquor Control Board, and Col. Donald McGugan, who retired as chairman after 18 years.

●

In reply to a question from commissioner Ed Lawson, Mr. Bruce said a board inspector found accepting gifts from distilling or brewing companies would not necessarily be fired.

"I don't think it's a good policy at all but I don't think I would discharge an inspector for accepting gifts or a kickback," he said. "But I'd certainly tell him not to do it again."

"We'd look upon it very carefully but as far as I know there is no case to be considered a precedent."

Earlier, the commission heard charges that one inspector accepted presents of apples and asparagus from a brewery.

Mr. Bruce also said companies have been told not to contribute to so-called coffee funds at government liquor stores.

●

The commission was also told that the provincial government has been "freeloading" on Vancouver and surrounding municipalities in finding solutions for problems caused by alcohol.

Former Vancouver police chief Ralph Booth said the provincial government is "very proud of its liquor profits" but has not accepted any costs to help solve the problems of alcoholism.

●

"Not one cent has been spent on the detoxication centre which we had to set up in a spare room at the city jail. The government has done nothing and can take no credit for contributing anything in these areas regarding liquor law enforcement and treatment centres for people who have alcohol problems," he said.

Mr. Booth also said too much emphasis is placed on the selling of liquor and not enough on the enjoyment of the product.

Molymine

Molymine Explorations Ltd. are undertaking a $30,000 preliminary exploration program on 24 nickel-copper claims in the Timmins, Ont., area, about two miles from an area being explored in Inco-Mining Corp.

Surveys will include detailed electromagnetic work, magnetometer runs and linecutting, with diamond drilling to follow if results are favorable.

Reichold

Reichold Chemicals (Canada) Ltd. will more than double its capacity to make polyesters and alkyds with completion of a second reactor at Port Moody soon.

The expansion will help supply demand by the paint and fiberglas industries.

President G. L. Hagen in a nine-month financial statement reports sales of $16.98 million, up $5.35 million, with net profit after taxes of $272,000, up $4,000. Per share income remained the same at 56 cents.

Dolly Varden

Drilling on its Wolf mine property is expected to be complete by the end of this month, reports Dolly Varden Mines Ltd. in its semi-annual financial statement.

Six shifts of drillers per day are employed on the ore proving program intended to define the limit of reserves.

For the six months ended Sept. 30 Dolly Varden reports $241,661 spent on development, $51,649 on administration and $1.6 million deferred development and administrative expenses at the beginning of the year for a new total of $1.9 million.

Working capital increased by $34,967 to $267,622 at Sept. 30. Sale of equipment and a capital stock issue provided $380,213 in new funds.

Imperial Bank

The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce reports net profit for the year ending Oct. 31 of $38.25 million or $1.10 a share compared with $32.9 million or 95 cents a share for the previous year.

Total assets were $9.199 billion up from $8.34 billion. Total revenue was $668.4 million up $164.67 million from the previous year and expenses were $543 million up $135.6 million.

Deposits were up 10 per cent to $8.39 billion.

CJOR

Agreement has been reached for the purchase of radio station CFRW and CFRW-FM Winnipeg by CJOR Ltd. of Vancouver. Creditors held a bankruptcy hearing Nov. 24 and CJOR's $100,000 tender was the only one offered.

James A. Pattison, president of the company which operates CJOR, said the purchase is subject to approval of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

CFRW will continue to operate under its existing licence until the CRTC deals with applications for transfer of assets and licence renewal.

Fleet

Fleet Manufacturing Ltd. had sales of $2.4 million and net income of $40,148 in the quarter ended Sept. 30, and did not report comparative performance for the year earlier.

Last year the company had sales of $13.4 million and earnings of $390,907, or 18 cents a share, in 12 months.

BP Oil

BP Canada Ltd. has changed its name to become easily bilingual BP Oil Ltd. and BP Petroles Ltee.

The name of the holding company, British Petroleum Co. of Canada Ltd., also has been changed. The new name will be BP Canada 1969 Ltd.

Royal Bank

The Royal Bank of Canada reported Tuesday night that the bank's total assets topped $10 billion for the first time in its history.

The bank said in its annual statement for the year ended Oct. 31, that assets reached $10.19 billion, up 16.6 per cent from $8.74 billion recorded in the previous year.

Net earnings were $40.5 million or $1.22 a share, 14.7 per cent higher than the $35.3 million or $1.06 a share, earned in 1968.

Total revenues in 1969 were $696 million, up 31.8 per cent from $528 million last year. Total expenses were $575.75 million, up 35.2 per cent.

Engineering Firm to Stay

VANCOUVER (CP) — A lease that will allow Vancouver Iron and Engineering Works Ltd. to stay in the city's False Creek industrial area for nine years was approved by city council Tuesday.

The new leases will be granted in two stages to Canadian Hydrocarbons Ltd. of Calgary which has proposed buying the assets of the defunct firm.

It will be effective for five years from Dec. 31, 1970, and if Canadian Hydrocarbons satisfies council it plans to relocate in the greater Vancouver area at the end of the nine years it may stay in the False Creek location until Dec. 31, 1979.

Should the company fail to meet the relocation condition, the lease will be re-negotiated yearly.

B.C. Farmer Income High For Canada

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The British Columbia agriculture industry is better off than its counterpart anywhere else in Canada, Provincial Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said Tuesday.

He told the annual meeting of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture that the taxpayer benefits because subsidies in B.C. average only $72 a farmer, compared with a high of $572 in Quebec.

He said the net income per farmer in B.C. is highest at $4,260, compared with $913 in Prince Edward Island, lowest in Canada.

"The federal subsidy as a percentage of farm net income is also lowest in B.C. at two per cent, compared with 22 per cent in New Brunswick," Shelford said. The minister said New Brunswick had the highest per centage of farm income.

The major farm problem facing the country is the grain surplus on the prairies.

"We now have approximately 1,400,000,000 bushels of grain, which means that even if we didn't produce any for the next two years and maintained a normal domestic use and export trade we would still have a surplus."

Shelford said the federal government must think carefully before proceeding with a plan to take 10,000,000 acres out of grain production because it may well create a surplus in other produce, such as beef or poultry products.

A better solution is to get out and sell more Canadain wheat, he said.

Father, Son Named To Plumbers Board

The Victoria mechanical contracting industry elected a father and son team to its industrial association executive Monday night.

Alex Rawlings and his son Jim were the pair elected at the annual meeting of the Mechanical Industrial Relations Association meeting at the Century Inn.

It marks the first time father and son have sat on the executive.

Elected chairman of the association was B. H. Johnson.

Other executive members are replacing Michael J. Griffin.

Other executive members are Blake Sprague, Wally Meakes, Barry Menzies, A. E. Evans, John Welham and E. Pridham.

JOINT CANADIAN BID FOR BIG SHIP ORDER

MONTREAL (CP) — A Canadian bid will be made to finance the building of six frigates for the Argentine Navy at a cost of $190,000,000.

The bid will be made jointly by the federal export development corporation and the Bank of Montreal, the two parties behind the financial arrangements to pay for the ships.

Should the Canadian financing proposal be accepted, prime contractor would be Marine Industries Ltd., with shipyards at Sorel, Que., in association with United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. and Canadian Westinghouse Ltd.

Suspension Rule Closely Studied

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto Stock Exchange and the Ontario Securities Commission are taking a long, hard look at the protection of the investing public.

One of the matters receiving the closest scrutiny is the ruling which allows the exchange to suspend trading in shares of any company which does not comply with the exchange's wishes.

John Kimber, exchange president, says this ruling has been "an effective weapon for the protection" of the public.

But some companies don't like it. While the exchange acts for the public, the companies say they are acting for shareholders.

Some of the 950 listed companies are exempt from the ruling. The exchange will not say who they are and Mr. Kimber says this is because the list frequently changes, as companies are moved from the exempt list to the non-exempt list and vice-versa.

DISCUSS RULE

The securities commission considers the regulation—known as Ruling 49—a matter of serious public importance and discussed it at hearings last month.

Edward A. Royce, commission chairman, says it will be some weeks before the commission brings down a decision.

The exchange is also reviewing its bylaws. Any proposed revisions must be approved by the commission.

The exchange uses the possibility of suspension to pry information from a company.

Critics of Ruling 49 argue that companies threatened with suspension of their shares should first be given a hearing. But the exchange says that unless it can act quickly on suspensions, assets—and sometimes people—may have disappeared or a stock price may have been manipulated, causing a loss to the public.

COURT COSTS HIGH

The exchange also says court action tends to be expensive and slow. Court action is also between two contesting parties and this may mean that the interests of the public beyond the courtroom are not represented.

The exchange says listing of shares is a privilege which gives the public some additional confidence in the stock. It, therefore, must be subject to certain responsibilities.

The exchange adds that it must see that these responsibilities are met and that if they are not, it must have the power to act quickly to suspend trading in the stock involved.

Nickel Price Hike Impact 'Minimal'

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said Tuesday the impact of a 25-per-cent-a-pound increase in the price of nickel will be minimal.

"The effects will be minimal unless people decide to maximize them," Pepin said in a Commons reply to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield.

Stanfield got no response when he asked whether he could take it from Pepin's reply that the government does not regard the price increase as inflationary.

Canadian nickel prices were raised recently to $1.28-a-pound from $1.03 in terms of United States funds.

Asked by Stanfield to give the results of a promised study about the impact of nickel price increases on Canadian costs, Pepin said some results are already indicated — "$1.30 on the price of an automobile, seven cents on the cost of a kitchen sink."

The minister observed that 96 per cent of Canadian nickel production is exported. Soviet nickel has been sold at more than $2 a pound, he added, and international prices were as high as $10 a pound during a prolonged autumn strike at International Nickel Co. of Canada in Sudbury, Ont.

Business Investment Boom In U.S. Will Accelerate

By HOBART ROWEN

WASHINGTON (WP) — The business investment boom—a major symptom and symbol of inflation—will accelerate even further in 1970, the Nixon administration reported Tuesday night.

According to the eagerly-awaited survey by the department of commerce and the securities and exchange commission, business expansion expenditures will rocket to an annual rate of $77.5 billion in the first half of 1970, up 11 per cent from the comparable period this year, and up 6 per cent from the second six months of 1969.

The administration was hoping for—and predicting—a less exuberant result.

"Anyone in my position," economic council chairman Paul W. McCracken said, "would have been hoping to see a more modest projected increase."

Estimated expenditures for this calendar year were placed at $71.2 billion in the new survey, a gain of 11 per cent over the full year 1968. Projected spending for the 4th quarter has been boosted 1.5 per cent since a survey this past summer.

For 1970, the outlook as presented by the government suggests an even bigger inflationary thrust than indications given in recent private surveys.

(Government estimates for the full year ahead will not be available until early in 1970.)

Although government officials had suggested that the private guesses were overshooting the mark, they were not inclined Tuesday to ignore the potentially serious implications of the Commerce-SEC numbers.

For one thing, McCracken noted, it means that the outlook for any significant reduction in record-high interest rates is "not encouraging." It also suggests, he added, that the government will have to continue with its rigorous policy of fiscal and monetary restraints even longer than it had earlier thought.

HELP ECONOMY

Business outlays for new plants and additions, and the equipment that goes in them are considered "high-powered" dollars, with a great stimulative impact on the economy.

To the extent that business borrows money to finance such expansion, it puts a strain on capital markets, hence interest rates; and the construction effort itself strains the supply of skilled manpower and of some materials.

McCracken pointed to some alleviating circumstances. First, he noted that plant and equipment expenditures are not a "leading indicator"; hence any slowing down of the economy would not show up there first.

Then, the Commerce-SEC figures show that the biggest surge in projected oulays is in the non-manufacturing sector, which could mean that the manufacturing sector (focus of many inflationary pressures) may be cooling off "a little."

Other officials noted that projections for spending are not always matched by results; thus the latest calculation for 1969 (an 11 per cent gain) is modestly lower than a 14 per cent figure projected in February.

Another consideration is that "real" plant expansion reflects a less dramatic increase, once adjusted for average price increases of perhaps 5 per cent.

But after making all such allowances, the picture presented by the figures Tuesday means that more inflationary pressures are still working through the economy than were anticipated in the Nixon "game plan."

Car Production In U.S. Drops

DETROIT (WP) — U.S. car production in November dropped 23 per cent from a year ago and was the lowest for the month in eight years.

The U.S. industry, cutting back output to keep inventories in line with softer sales, produced 675,207 cars in November, down about 198,000 from the 873,193 cars produced in the same month last year. It was the lowest November total since 646,013 cars were produced in 1961.

Production is scheduled to drop again this month. Ward's Automotive Reports estimates December output at 659,000 units, down from 714,678 a year ago. Ward's says the forecast takes into account major shutdowns over the year-end holiday.

PM Denies Authorizing Chair Change

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau denied in the Commons Tuesday that he gave any authorization for government moves to replace Alfred Hales (PC-Wellington) with an NDP member as chairman of the Commons accounts committee.

Oppisition Leader Robert Stanfield asked Trudeau about reports that Trudeau's parliamentary secretary, James Walker (L-York Centre), had suggested to NDP Whip Stanley Knowles (Winnipeg North Centre) that Harold Winch (NDP-Vancouver East) replace Hales.

Had the prime minister authorized his parliamentary secretary to make such a suggestion? Stanfield asked.

Trudeau first turned to Donald Macdonald, the government House leader, for a whispered conversation and then rose.

"I don't know whether the question is . . ." he began, and stopped.

"No," he said.

Cost Revealed

VANCOUVER (CP) — A September strike in its political science, anthropology and sociology department cost Simon Fraser University in suburban Burnaby $23,000 in tuition refunds and 168 students withdrew from school, SFU registrar Harry Evans told the university senate Monday.

MOVEMENT HAS HISTORICAL BACKGROUND

Separatists Making New Conquests

POPULATION BREAKDOWN for Canada is shown in this newsmap pictorial graph. Thirty per cent of Canadians are of French origin, and 25 per cent of the total population is of French origin and living in Quebec province. (AP Newsmap.)

MONTREAL (AP) — Canada is a land of stark contrast, and nowhere is the contrast more evident than in the beautiful province of Quebec.

In "La Belle Province," as it's called, a hunter can get hopelessly lost in nearly unexplored wilderness, a tourist can travel through what is virtually an old world city, or a swinging jet-setter can discover a modern, sophisticated city to suit his tastes.

●

And it is Quebec which provides the most enigmatic question and the most serious threat to national unity which Canada has had to face since the establishment of the Canadian confederation in the 1860s.

Of Canada's 20 million citizens, about six million are French-speaking Canadians. Of these, five million live in Quebec Province, along with about two million English-speaking inhabitants.

●

A growing number of French Canadians want a separate nation, apart from the rest of English-speaking Canada. Until recently, there was no single organization to unite the many splintered factions which supported separatism.

But now, a new group, "Parti Quebecois," dedicated to splitting the province from the rest of Canada, is bidding to unite these factions. Most observers don't think there's a chance the new party's fiery leader, Rene Levesque, will be able to promote unity soon, and there seems to be little chance for an independent Quebec in the foreseeable future.

An American's View of Quebec And Separatism In Canada

But inroads are being made. In November, the 180,000-member Federation of St. Jean Baptiste Societies voted overwhelmingly to support Quebec independence and apply pressure on political parties and other groups to do so.

Aside from the practical language problem facing most French-speaking Canadians, the separatist movement has a long historical background.

Canada's earliest roots, dating back to the 1630s, were French. Left in a weakened state by wars with the Iroquios Indians late in the 17th century, the French settlers found themselves threatened by an increasing influx of English settlers. The Seven Years War, ending with the surrender of Montreal in 1760, finished the official French reign.

●

About a century later governing authorities ordered the execution of Louis Riel after he made two abortive attemps to start rebellions. The act had the effect of solidifying French nationalism in Quebec, and the issue was left to smoulder.

Recently, it has burst into flame, in the form of widespread bombings in the province's largest city, Montreal. Close relations between Quebec and France have helped to fan the flames. Whether Canadian unity will be able to survive this latest bout with French nationalism remains to be seen.

Being approachable proves its worth.

Being approachable is something we are – not just something we say. It can be measured in many ways, on any day, in any of our branches. And once a year it can be measured in the concrete terms of our annual balance sheet.

This year, our balance sheet shows a unique accomplishment. As a fitting conclusion to our one hundredth year, our assets have grown to exceed Ten Billion Dollars. As bankers, we are proud of this growth through responsible service.

As Canadians, we are doubly proud that "The Royal" has once more confirmed its international stature as one of the largest banks in the entire free world.

To our more than 22,700 employees, and to all the people whom we serve in Canada and around the world – our most sincere "thank you" for your Ten Billion Dollar vote of confidence in our approachability.

THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

'The Royal'—Canada's ten billion dollar bank.

Housing for Poor, Drug Addiction Called Victoria's Top Problems

Lack of housing for low-income families and drug addiction were described as Victoria's biggest problems by mayoralty candidate Ald. Ian Stewart Tuesday at the Empress Hotel.

Stewart appeared with the other three candidates, Ald. Robert Baird, J. Courtney Haddock and Bill Scott at a luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis Club of Victoria.

Stewart said, if elected mayor, his first action would be to consult with all aldermen and prepare a working agenda for the year.

"Then, we must come to grips with the problem of housing. People in the community with building and financial expertise, as well as churches, the Community Council and unions will be asked to help."

He said that the problem of young drug users was a community one and should be tackled as such. Doctors, police, schools, parents and children must all be involved in the solution.

•

He denied Haddock's assertion that local improvements on the 700 block of Yates had been heavily underwritten by the homeowners' tax dollar.

"This is another red herring in Haddock's campaign. I am, and have always been, against downtown improvements being financed by the residential dollar."

•

Haddock accused the present and past councils of treating municipal politics as a part-time job. "You can't establish good relationships with government at provincial and federal levels with a part-time council."

He advocated that tenants should be placed on the voting list and said he was against having polling days on a Saturday. "They should be in the middle of the week, say, Tuesday."

•

Haddock said he was not parochial but felt that people in other municipalities should pay their fair share of facilities provided by the city.

"We're now faced with the community swimming pool project. We (Victoria taxpayers) will have to pay the operating losses. No one has told us how much these might be."

Haddock said he would aim for no increase in taxes through applying businesslike administration at city hall.

•

Scott, after saying that apathy, proven by the fact that only 67 per cent of the eligible voters had turned out at the polls in the last 16 years, and "financial bankruptcy" were the two chief problems, spent the rest of his seven-minute speaking time lambasting the news media.

"The papers have shown prejudice in the coverage of the election and the radio stations are getting mixed up in it too. I object to them not presenting Bill Scott's target to shoot at.

•

"When Stewart had his Wharf Street development project and Haddock his Work Point dock story, they both received headlines and front page coverage. When I talked about a free port, the story was buried at the bottom of page 31.

"This is yellow press at its worst."

Denying that Victoria had financial problems, Baird, who is chairman of the finance committee, said that the city "had about the best credit rating in Canada."

He added that the city was earning "between $136,000 to $141,000" as interest on investments. He said the gross debt outstanding was $8,920,000, 6.42 per cent of the capital assessment.

The four candidates agreed on one question, asked from the floor.

All were in favor of eventual amalgamation but Stewart added that amalgamation was not an issue today.

"We now have regional planning for several vital services. Regional government is growing and will be refined in the next few years, which will be vital ones.

"We still need local government to deal with the variety of priorities each municipality is faced with."

Success Pushes Project Learning

Success has mainly greeted the first stage of Project Learning, the Greater Victoria school board's scheme to involve a cross-section of the community in education planning.

The first stage, familiarizing participants with the workings and philosophy behind the project through a series of public meetings, will wind up this week.

Two more meetings are scheduled, one tonight at 8 p.m. at Mount View Senior Secondary, and the final one at Oak Bay Junior Thursday.

Dr. John Wiens, the board's director of insturction and the man who has done most of the organizing, was mainly pleased with the results so far at Tuesday's meeting at Gordon Head Junior.

"The problem has been in terms of success — so many people want to get on committees and we can only offer a few places."

One of the purposes of the public meetings is to select members of the public to serve on a committee to represent each of the six main population areas of the district.

★ ★ ★

But while many people indicate a desire to be a committee member, there are only four places available on each committee. The rest are filled by students, teachers, a trustee, a principal and an administrator.

The committees will meet several times between January and April to determine the purposes of education in public schools. Meanwhile, persons vitally concerned with the discussions will be able to meet informally with the four lay members representing their area.

In this way, Dr. Wiens said, students, parents and teachers can continue to participate indirectly in the disucssions.

He said he was delighted that students have been attending the public meetings, which also include teachers, a few trustees and a large proportion of parents.

"We're getting a slightly larger proportion than usual, but most of the people we'd like to get at obviously don't think we're serious."

Ted Thrown the Torch in Darkest Hour

By JOSEPH E. MOHBAT

WASHINGTON (AP) — Anticipating the death of his elderly father not long ago, Edward M. Kennedy said: "Well, then I'll really be it. And that's a lot."

Now he is it.

In six wrenching years he has gone from Teddy, the carefree kid brother, to eldest male and leader of the family.

The newest burden, descending late in his 38th year, fell at a time when Kennedy was moving at a dead run to escape the long shadow of the midsummer tragedy of Chappaquiddick Island.

•

He still bears heavily the death of Mary Jo Kopechne. But all things considered—for a man who had survived the murders of two brothers and the violent deaths of three companions within arm's reach in vehicle accidents, and whose name and future had come under a nasty cloud—the young senator is recovering remarkably.

Four months after the night on Chappaquiddick, those who know Kennedy best testify that he is regaining confidence and spirit, walking taller, and even getting more satisfaction than ever from his work as a senator.

The nightmarish night off Martha's Vineyard and Kennedy's subsequent moves had virtually stilled talk about his running for president in 1972. It's now evident that for him, it was the lifting of a millstone from his shoulders.

KENNEDY
. . . head of clan

"Now," a close friend said, "Teddy's in the position of being able to concentrate on those issues he's interested in—Vietnam, the draft, pollution, the poor—and handle them as he himself would like, rather than as he might think he has to as a presidential contender—you know, less candidly.

"He can take things on squarely and say what he feels without worrying about what people, and the Nixon administration, are going to say about his motives."

•

Even at a glance, it's apparent Edward Kennedy has come a long way from the gloom that gripped him after Chappaquiddick.

He still keeps in close touch with Miss Kopechne's parents. His battle against a belated autopsy on the girl is less for legal reasons—his advisers think it could only help him—than in sympathy with their opposition.

As he awaits the long-delayed inquest into her death, expressing eagerness to clear up at last the remaining unanswered questions, he is able again, among friends, to laugh and enjoy himself. He continues to keep his public appearances businesslike and still hasn't reached the point where he will again dress up his speeches with humor. But those who know Kennedy well report that he's "snapping back."

"I guess not having to read about it in the press every day helps," Kennedy said recently, admitting that he was feeling better.

"Now I'm looking forward to next March. By then the legal things (meaning the pending inquest into Miss Kopechne's death) should be cleared away."

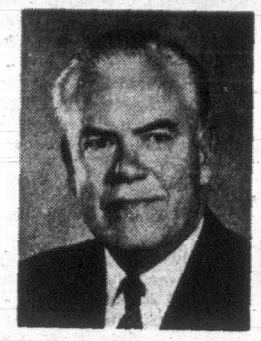

With his father dead, December has been cleared of most official business to allow Kennedy to assume leadership of the vast family.

Joseph P. Kennedy had been seriously ill for most of eight years and was 81 when he died. But he had been there, a symbol and rallying point for the clannish Kennedy progeny. Now he is not.

•

Teddy, the only survivor of four sons, has changed physically since Chappaquiddick. He has dropped at least 15 pounds from his big frame and allowed his hair to grow longer.

With the shedding of weight his face has thinned, his eyes have become more intense, to a point where more often then ever now, he shows traces of Robert Kennedy, even to the dry, humorless, hissing laugh, the cold, upward glances from the downcast face.

Churches Urge French In Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian Council of Churches at sessions of its triennial conference here urged that all clergymen in Quebec province speak French.

In a resolution on language, one of the strongest yet by a national church organization, the council has called on all Canadians to maintain an "open relationship with the province of Quebec in the fulfilment of its destiny."

The Canadian Council of Churches is an organization of 11 Protestant and Orthodox denominations. It asked a joint committee working with the Canadian Catholic Conference to make a thorough study of the French-English problem and to submit its views to the parent bodies.

The language resolution urged that all churches share complete information with their communities regarding charges of discrimination, disadvantages and prejudices which, it said, French-Canadians feel they have borne for so long.

The resolution followed a week of discussion on the subject by a section of the meeting under chairman Rev. Claude de Mestral of Montreal, a French-speaking United Church minister who directs Dialogue, an ecumenical study centre here.

In other final business Friday, the council defeated a proposal for a token contribution for the Nigeria-Biafra relief fund on the ground that members have already given more than $1,000,000 to the cause.

A resolution expressing support of the California grape boycott was referred back to the executive committee for further study. Another to intensify relations with the Canadian Catholic Conference received support.

Expediency Bad Trait

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A research psychologist who studied 1,100 Los Angeles high school students says those most likely to "run afoul of the vehicle code" show a high level of "expediency."- Dr. Edward Levonian defined expediency as "looking out for No. 1, even if it means hurting someone else."

He said a student with a high expediency score would be inclined to leave high-beam lights on until an oncoming driver lowered his; would force his way into a line of cars in an adjacent lane, or would speed up to beat out a driver trying to make a left turn across an intersection.

Dr. Levonian says boys showed the tendency more than girls. He gave no specific figures.

'Stinking' Right Name

COCCOLIA, Italy (AP) — The maps say Coccolia but the sign at the town limits says Puzzolia. That means stinking village.

The 18,000 residents agree the new name is fitting. They claim pollution in the Ronco River is so bad that it leaves black stains on buildings, rots pipes, tarnishes silver and copperware, makes apples and grapes grown nearby inedible and gives them headaches.

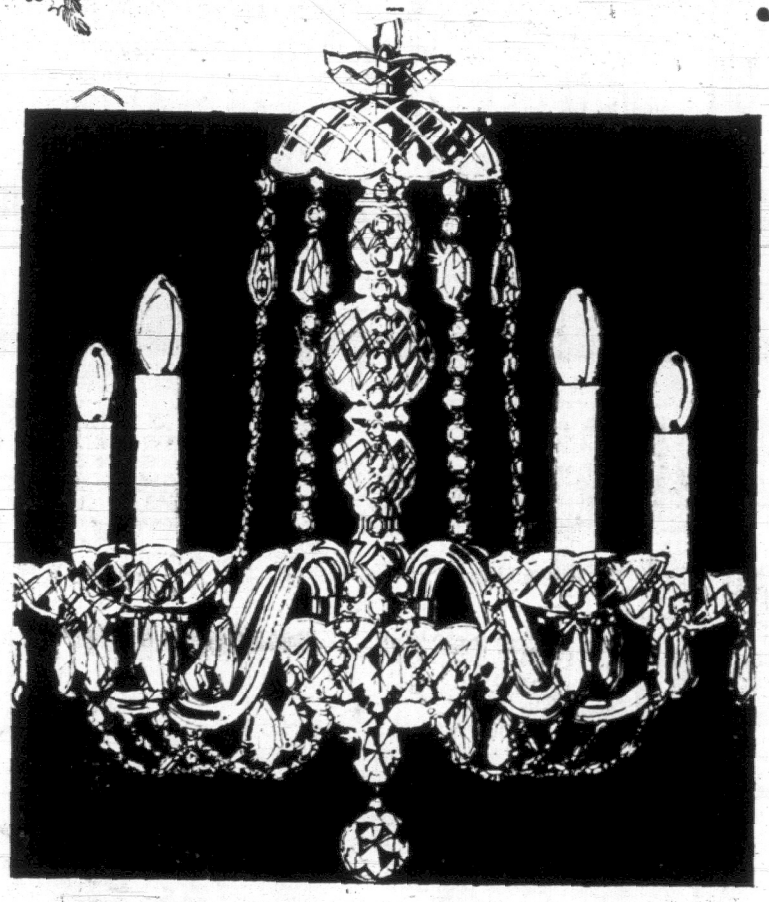

Silvio Lombardi of the provincial health institute said the river, which carries sewage and waste from Ravenna, is worse than a cesspool.

Italy has no laws that say what an industry can or cannot dump into rivers. Residents say two sugar factories, a distillery, and a rayon mill have made the Ronco one of the worst-polluted rivers in Italy.

CNR Draws Fire From All Sides of Commons

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian National Railways drew fire from all sides of the Commons Tuesday in second reading debate on a routine government bill to provide money for the Crown-owned system.

Eymard Corbin (L—Madawaska-Victoria) said members of Parliament should not be asked to support the bill until they are given adequate assurance that needed rail services would be continued in their areas.

He said he was angered by CNR plans to reduce service through his northern New Brunswick riding.

The bill provides $201,700,000 capital financing for the CNR and Air Canada over the 18 months ending June 1, 1970.

●

Richard Southam (PC—Qu'Appelle-Moose Mountain) and Les Benjamin (NDP—Regina-Lake Centre) said the government should commit itself to writing off the debt of the publicly-owned railway.

Mr. Benjamin, a former Canadian Pacific Railway agent, said the write-off of a $1,900,000,000 debt would end the annual requirement for a parliamentary bill to pay CNR deficits.

Charles-Eugene Dionne (Creditiste—Kamouraska) said there are cases of administrative inefficiency in the CNR.

Mr. Corbin complained specifically about CNR plans to remove a scheduled passenger train from the Halifax-Montreal run through his hometown of Edmundston, N.B., and replace it Jan. 7 with a dayliner.

●

The CNR was "exterminating service to the Canadian people."

Mr. Benjamin said the CNR should also be forced to improve the lot of company pensioners.

A government write-off of the CNR debt would include a grant to enable the company to pay back the $671,423,250 the railway has borrowed from its employees' pension fund.

Ralph W. Stewart (L—Cochrane) said the railway system provides poor service and by abandoning runs on unproven grounds it was losing money.

The CNR and CP Rail have applied to the Canadian transport commission to abandon services on a total of 31 passenger routes they say are losing money.

The applications are the first step to qualify the routes for subsidies of up to 60 per cent on losses while operating the lines in the public interest.

Harold Winch (NDP—Vancouver East) said the CNR—and CP Rail—are under a contractual obligation to provide transcontinental rail service, both passenger and freight.

●

Any deviation from that duty would be a betrayal of Canada.

Debate on the financing bill was to continue today.

In the Senate, a medical doctor said some persons entering Canada should be exempt from immunization requirements when it appears likely they may have adverse reactions to vaccination.

Senator J. A. Sullivan (PC—Ontario) said such persons should be designated by a quarantine officer "who should be a medical man."

●

He was speaking during debate on a bill to prevent the introduction into Canada of infectious or contagious diseases. It was later given second reading and sent to committee for study.

The Senate also gave second reading Tuesday to amendments to the customs tariff and the Excise Act.

STRIKE THREAT EASES

WASHINGTON (AP) — The threat of a country-wide railway shutdown was eased today after union and industry negotiators were reported near a wage settlement and had agreed to continue bargaining.

"We are very close to a settlement, I believe," said Assistant Labor Secretary W. J. Usery after 38 hours of nearly continuous bargaining in the dispute involving 48,000 shopcraft workers on all major U.S. railways.

'Devil Winds' Return

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "Devil Winds"—hot dry blasts from the desert—that scourge southern California annually—are back.

Some days they're almost a blessing—just strong enough to blow the smog away, exposing citizens to unfiltered Indian summer sunshine.

Other days, as high pressure from the interior funnels them through mountain canyons into the Los Angeles basin with jet stream force, they can be devastating.

Dust dims the sun. Trailers and campers are flipped. Aerials whine. Shingles fly. Cars are sand-blasted. Brush fires—their embers picked up and carried a mile on the fly—spread with fantastic rapidity.

Origin of their name, the Santa Ana or Santa winds, is lost in history. Many just call them by heir nickname, Devil Winds. Sometimes they hit 100 miles an hour.

They're worst in November. And they're the worst for firemen. Already this year they've made a big brush fire out of one little one. But so far there's been no siege of day after day of blast, the kind that sends fires racing over thousands of acres.

Their near-zero humidity sucks moisture from brush, so it burns almost explosively when there's a spark.

Dwellers near mountain canyons, where the wind blows fiercest, have to pay extra for insurance against wind damage.

'KIDS ASK FOR THE MOON; PARENTS DON'T'

Toy Firms Look to Adults to Boost Their Sales

By DEAN C. MILLER
UPI Business Editor

NEW YORK — The $4 billion toy and games industry has shifted its sales sights from the kids to the adults.

"We are doing more adult advertising today then ever before," said Jack Jones, vice-president of advertising at Mattel, Inc., which says it is the biggest toy company in the world.

"That's true," said Lionel Weintraub, president of Ideal Toys and head of the Toy Manufacturers of America, Inc.

"We've learned that children ask for the moon. We're now informing the parents who do the buying what is, in our opinion, a good value."

There is some disagreement among toy spokesmen on how sales will fare this Christmas. Jones sees a good year. Weintraub said sales "have been picking up in the last few days" after a slow start. And James J. Shea, Jr., president of Milton Bradley Co., projects an $90 million year for the company and "good Christmas sales."

All agree their ace in the hole is emotional buying. How do you say "no" to a child asking for a toy. Especially around an emotional holiday such as Christmas?

But more and more the toy manufacturers are depending less and less on holiday emotion. They're building

'Ace in the Hole' Is Emotional Buying . . . Can't Say No to a Child year-'round demand through emphasis on year-'round desires.

Mattel, which has four factories in this country and eight in foreign countries, relies heavily on dolls for the girls and "Hot Wheels" for the boys.

Mattel's Barbie Doll is practically an institution, many forms—nurse, bather, fashion model—but she has friends, accessories, sisters, brothers, different costumes. There's no end to Barbie and her activities. Her sales have grown since 1959 to $500 million annually.

Barbie has her own magazine. Her international fan club is larger than any other girl's organization except the Girl Scouts of America.

There are, according to Jones, 1.5 million Barbie club members around the world. It takes a full staff at Mattell's offices near Los Angeles just to answer her fan mail.

Last year Mattel latched onto a hot item for the boys. It was "Hot Wheels," a combination collectors' item and action item, a miniature car line which does for today's kids what miniature trains did for yesterday's children.

Grand Prix racers, Camaros, Barracudas, Corvettes charge out of starting stalls in the home and race around Christmas trees and basement set-ups.

"It's all part of the today generation's interest in cars and speed and science," said Jones, as he munched a doughnut during a breakfast interview.

"You have to keep up with the times, even in the toy business, or you are left in the starting gate.

"You also," said Jones, "have to aim your advertising and promotion at parents now. The day when you got kids to pressure parents into buying your product is over. Now you also have to convince parents that the product is worth the money and is educational or a lot of fun, or both."

ROBERT BAIRD SAYS:

"A full time mayor with an open door and an open mind should be ready to listen and ask for those with problems and personal anxieties."

"For Example: One way street planning to keep bus passengers in mind so that sufficient bus stops are provided."

Judge Rules Space Prayers Are A-Okay

By ANN ARNOLD

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — A federal judge Tuesday dismissed Madalyn Murray O'Hair's suit seeking to ban the broadcast of space prayers by American astronauts.

U.S. District Judge Jack Roberts said a decision in favor of Mrs. O'Hair, an Austin atheist and housewife, would have violated the religious rights of astronauts.

"The first amendment does not require the state to be hostile to religion, but only neutral," Roberts said in his opinion.

Mrs. O'Hair won a U.S. Supreme Court decision six years ago that prohibited compulsory prayer in public schools.

In her latest suit, she criticized the spacemen of Apollo 8 and 11 for engaging "in religious ceremonies . . . to establish the Christian religion of the United States government before the world."

A three-judge panel headed by federal Appeals Court Judge Homer Thornberry, heard arguments in the space prayer case Nov. 24—the day the Apollo 12 astronauts returned from the moon. In today's decision, Thornberry and U.S. district Judge Adrian Spears let Roberts issue his opinion.

Roberts said Mrs. O'Hair's civil rights were not infringed by bible readings and prayers said by Apollo 8 last Christmas and the moon-landing trip of Apollo 11 last July.

Roberts ruled in favor of a motion by attorneys for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to dismiss the suit because Mrs. O'Hair lacked the legal standing to sue the government.

Mrs. O'Hair indicated today she will appeal at least part of the Texas court's decision to the U.S. Supreme Court.

"I'm excited and delighted," she said. "If we had had to go into a lengthy court hearing on this it would have compounded the cost for us."

THE LAST STEAM LOCOMOTIVE for logging in Canada was replaced by trucks this week. This old Baldwin 1055 was retired by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. in a ceremony at Ladysmith. Built in Philadelphia in 1928, the saddle tank locomotive since 1938 has hauled logs from the Nanaimo River 20 miles to MacMillan Bloedel's mill in Chemainus. For the last nine years the locomotive has been operated by engineer Peter McGovern and fireman Fred Lawes.

'Let's Clean Up Our Backyards First' Candidates Agree in Pollution Attack

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN — The aldermanic hopefuls stated positive views against pollution Tuesday night and the incumbents replied: "Let's clean up our own backyards first."

Ron Hill, manager of an auto-marine store, suggested at an all-candidates forum that a bylaw should be passed by the city to control the sale of harmful pesticides and herbicides and an outright ban on DDT.

"If we can pass bylaws to restrict the sale of firecrackers surely we can have a bylaw to control something much more of a threat to our lives."

Andy Anand, who decided not to run for a second term on school board in favor of attempting to gain a seat on city council, said the government should put teeth into its Pollution Control Act.

An employee of Crofton Pulp and Paper Company, he spoke of controlling the dumping of raw sewage and non-biodegradable detergents in water supplies.

Incumbent Tom Kilpatrick favored beautification, increased park development, urban renewal ("now held up by the federal government") and pollution control on the local level.

"We can't expect the government to act on Port Hardy effluent when we haven't cleaned up our back yards."

Similarly, incumbent Dick Benzies said, "We have heard a lot about pollution but municipalities are tied to the government's pollution control plans by the Municipal Act."

He cited the city's sewage lagoon as an example of local pollution control but decided something better should be planned for garbage disposal and trash-burning.

Duncan uses an open dump in Eagle Heights area on Indian Reserve land.

On other subjects, Ald. Rois Harder, who seldom raises an angry voice, lashed out at people "who are always phoning and complaining" but who were absent in great numbers at the poorly-attended forum.

Only about 20 attended the Jaycee-sponsored meeting at Cowichan Senior Secondary School. Jaycee president Harry Gurgulis said the candidates would have stood a better chance of getting votes by spending their time button-holing strangers on the street.

Harder said better public relations between council and public is needed and despite the press, "not enough day-to-day council business is getting along to the public."

Anand favored amalgamation with North Cowichan starting with fire, water and sewer services.

"Who needs two councils to serve 30,000 people?"

Kilpatrick said he would work towards creation of a downtown parking corporation for the benefit of public and businessmen.

He was "not much interested" in the joint services study to be undertaken by the city and municipality when it is ratified by the councils.

"Our water system is already paid for. I can't see having to pay for it all over again."

Benzies said if the feasibility study showed that it is financially advisable for Duncan to proceed with amalgamation of services he would go along with it. He pointed out that there are only 1,300 taxpayers in the city and 50 per cent of the taxes are paid by the downtown merchants.

Anand said it is time for the aldermen to do some of the experts' jobs instead of spending taxpayers' money in setting up more and more surveys.

Tourist Feature 'Rat-Infested'

DUNCAN—What is a tourist attraction in some people's minds is a "rat-infested, cockroach-ridden bunch of shacks" to others, a public forum was told Tuesday night.

Jack Baillie, one of 20 persons who attended the Jaycee-sponsored all-candidates meeting, said the four remaining buildings in Duncan's downtown Chinatown "should be bulldozed into the ground."

He blamed the city for continuing to hang on to "these eyesores."

Ald. Rois Harder said it is true the city owned the property and gained revenue from the old-timers living there but it was understood they were planning to move.

"We are encouraging them to move out but we can't just throw these old people out into the street."

Ald. Tom Kilpatrick defended the old wooden, cream and red colored buildings, all that remain of a thriving Chinatown which once sported a hotel with upper and lower verandahs which attracted artists and photographers.

The hotel was removed to make way for a new courthouse.

"These buildings many be an eyesore to you but they are a tourist attraction to others. Some people come into Duncan just to see them," Kilpatrick said.

He said a plan is being studied to determine if one or more of them could be moved to a more convenient downtown location or out to the Cowichan Valley Forest Museum.

"Are you joking?" Baillie said. "If you move one of those shacks the others will all fall down. The city should bulldoze them down tomorrow."

Kilpatrick said only the Pekin Cafe could not be moved. The others were structurally sound.

Full Time Human Rights Body Sought by Labor Federation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor Wednesday called for an enlarged full-time provincial human rights commission with representation from minority groups.

The request was made in a brief to the human rights commission, which also sits as the provincial labor relations board. The federation earlier asked for an increase in the minimum wage to $2 hourly from $1.25 while the commission sat in its other capacity.

The federation said the body had too much work in the labor field to be able to act as the rights commission and called for a separate commission to ensure "a truly effective job of enforcing the Human Rights Act."

"The commission should also be constituted as to represent some of the minority groups in our province," the brief said.

"A white member may believe sincerely that he or she possess the greatest empathy for a member of another race but he will never be able to see a particular problem through the eyes of a black man or an Indian."

FULL-TIME JOB

"The director and investigators should be full-time employees of the commission and not expected to investigate complaints of discrimination on top of the many bargaining unit and labor relations investigations they must now conduct."

An expanded body for safeguarding human rights could devote more time to "learning to recognize subtle discrimination and to understanding the mentality and culture of the minority groups they are trying to help." It could also speak to business, union and school groups and publish material on human rights.

The brief detailed job application forms from industries in the province which ask for information on nationality and race of origin of job applicants, saying such questions are contrary to provincial legislation.

The federation also criticized existing legislation for "denying coverage" to domestics employed in private homes and said persons discriminating in hiring domestics should not be allowed to hire them at all.

Farm Body's Finance Woes Underscored by President

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The British Columbia Federation of Agriculture is short of money and the province's 15,000 farmers will not get the kind of attention they deserve unless a new way of collecting dues is found, federation president Gordon Park said Tuesday.

Mr. Park, of Pitt Meadows, 25 miles east of Vancouver, told the two-day BCFA convention in this Vancouver suburb that the group can't do a proper job for the $212,000,000 provincial industry.

"As in every other segment of our society, the federation has felt rising costs and has cut corners as much as possible in order to operate within a deficit budget of $1,500. We cannot of course continue to operate at this level for any prolonged time."

The most basic need of the federation, Mr. Park said, is more funds for increased staff, field trips and communications with the more than 80 member organizations.

Last year the federation operated on a budget of $46,000, raised through a membership charge ranging from $2 to $3.15.

The federation plans to collect dues on a proportional basis, based on gross income for each commodity group, through different farm organizations.

Minister Reports Farmers In B.C. Ahead of Nation

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—The British Columbia agriculture industry is better off than its counterpart anywhere else in Canada, provincial Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford said Tuesday.

He told the annual meeting of the B.C. Federation of Agriculture in this Vancouver suburb that the taxpayer benefits because subsidies in B.C. average only $72 a farmer, compared with a high of $572 in Quebec.

He said the net income per farmer in B.C. is highest at $4,260, compared with $913 in Prince Edward Island.

"The federal subsidy as a percentage of farm net income is also lowest in B.C. at two per cent, compared with 22 per cent in New Brunswick," Mr. Shelford said.

The major farm problem facing the country is the grain surplus on the Prairies.

"We now have approximately 1,400,000,000 bushels of grain, which means that even if we didn't produce any for the next two years and maintained a normal domestic use and export trade we would still have a surplus."

Youth Sentenced

VANCOUVER (CP) — County Court Judge W. A. McClellan sentenced Camile Dennis Baker, 21, to one year in jail and a second year indefinite Tuesday for selling LSD and said youths who are still skeptical about the dangers of the hallucinogenic drug should watch users as they come into city hospitals for treatment.

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1969—PAGE 23

DISGRUNTLED FISHERMEN at Fishermen's Wharf wonder when they'll get some government action on their problem. Discussing measures to meet the emergency are, left to right, Ted Evans, Gus Broshell, Ed Brownlee and John Wilson. In his eighties, Wilson, says he'll be unable to spend the winter aboard his boat If 11. "I guess I'm going to be forced ashore."

Fire Hazard Feared At Fishermen's Dock

Candles Even Used After Power Cut

By PAT DUFOUR

Fishermen's Wharf could be a major fire hazard in the city this winter.

Power to the wharf has been cut off since the federal public works department rebuilt the jetties in August. All the power lines were removed before the work was started. They have not been replaced.

To combat the deficiency, fishermen living aboard their boats say they are using every means in their power to keep warm and maintain equipment.

One is using candles for light. Others are humping down coal, oil heaters or gasoline motors.

The city leases the wharf, located at the foot of Erie, from the federal transport department on a yearly basis but is powerless to remedy the situation.

City engineer James Garnett explains: "When any electrical work is renewed, or replaced, it has to meet the current electrical code standards which are set by federal law.

"The department of public works should have known this and budgeted the extra money needed when they rebuilt the jetties. They didn't do this and now they have to go through the long process of putting the job out to tender, going back to the treasury for extra funds, and eventually getting the work done."

'I Would Shout Like Hell'

Garnett says the fishermen have a real beef.

"If I was in their place I would be belly-aching and shouting like hell."

In Vancouver, Warren Parkinson, superintendent of construction for the works department, admitted it would be quite a while before the fishermen could expect action.

"We have been arguing with the City of Victoria's electrical inspector for weeks. Things came to a head about 10 days ago — and I guess we lost the argument."

Asked how far his department had gone with the project, he said they still have not appointed an electrical consultant to draw up plans.

Gus Broshell, who lives aboard his 38-foot troller Early Dawn II, says his buddies are wrong to lay the blame with city hall.

"It's not their fault—but we sure should get some pretty fast action from the federal department."

He points out that, apart from creating a fire hazard, lack of power means lack of navigational safety.

"We don't have the usual red lights at the end of the piles anymore. In fog or at night when some of the tugs go by full belt—there's a real risk."

Lawren Meyer, 440 Simcoe, says the old system of power was "two-bitting me to death."

He and other fishermen hope that the new system—when they get it—will be a fairer one.

"Here we had only two meters on each long finger. We kept putting in quarters all day long. We should have something like they have at Port Alberni where power is averaged out between everyone."

Ed Brownlee, 25 Ontario, estimates the loss of power will cost the fishermen thousands of dollars.

"A lot of us rely on heat lamps in the engine room, especially when there's frost. Half the batteries in the fleet are dead now, even though we've been running our engines and burning up fuel to keep things going."

Although several of the fishermen feel they're paying too high a price for wharfage and power, city statistics show that $9,608 was spent on Fishermen's Wharf from January to the end of October against a revenue of $7,881.

Garnett says it is a deficit operation for the city.

"We operate on a budget of $11,315 and we'll likely receive $10,800 by the end of the year."

THERE'S A MESSAGE in the flag flying alongside the Motor Vehicle Inspection Station on McKenzie. But what message? Upside-down emblem may mean traffic officials are in distress or have even surrendered, only half-way through Safe Driving Week. Or has the arrival of December caused ALL the leaves to fall? (Irving Strickland Photo).

CIVIC ELECTION WATCH

Parading Out Two Socreds Adds Up to One-Upmanship

By JIM HUME

The disposition of Social Credit party faithful in the present Victoria civic election creates a fascinating political situation.

While all candidates claim to have risen above and beyond party ties, at least two mayoralty candidates have been on display with cabinet ministers, ex-cabinet ministers or just plain old MLAs.

A third has the support of former Social Credit stalwart Hugh Ramsay.

Courtney Haddock was the first to pull a ranking Socred out of the hat.

At a press conference at the Imperial Inn he proudly introduced former Health Minister Eric Martin who in turn proudly introduced Haddock. It was one of the better days for back-slapping.

●

Not to be outdone Ald. Robert Baird had Public Works Minister W. N. Chant and MLA John Tisdalle front and centre for a miniature rally.

Oneupmanship is wonderful game at election time.

Both were careful to point out that these were just personal friends and did not indicate party support.

Who's Hugh Ramsay supporting? Actively, nobody. But he makes no secret of the fact that his sympathies lie with Ald. Ian Stewart purely on the grounds that in Ramsay's opinion he's the best man for the mayor's job.

It's no secret, of course, that while Stewart may have picked up support from other political faiths, his core organization is Liberal.

●

There are still no bets out—except by individual candidate supporters—among sideline observers. It's a three-way race and could go any way. But it does present us with the rarity of a divided Socred group with a three-way split to a bulky vote.

And if you don't believe the voters are divided and confused on this one, recall what you read Monday about people who signed nomination papers.

Haddock's papers were signed by Peter Pollen.

In turn Pollen's papers were signed by Halet F. Hallat, who just happens to be Stewart's law partner. Hallat staunchly supports Stewart for mayor.

By nine o'clock Saturday night we should be able to find out how they finally sorted it out behind the polling booth curtains.

Victoria isn't the only municipality to have an interesting fight on its hands.

In Esquimalt retired naval Captain—Surgeon Dr. J. W. Rogers is taking a hard run at Arthur G. Young.

It is interesting because this marks Rogers' third attempt to crack the Esquimalt nut. Not an easy task with Mayor Ray Bryant openly supporting Young. Across the Selkirk Water that support isn't discarded lightly.

●

The other big hurdle Rogers must surmount, and it's quite a formidable one, is that all members of Esquimalt council openly, or behind the scenes, also support Young.

On the surface Rogers' promise to let a little daylight into Esquimalt affairs makes the most sense, but it's never been easy to buck the status quo.

Behind the tweed curtain Frances Elford and Walter Dodsworth are conducting their battle with all the decorum of a crumpet party.

It will probably continue that way right down to the wire.

FINAL SHOTS DUE THURSDAY NIGHT

An all-out effort that might amount to the last official gasp for some civic candidates comes when Victoria Jaycees mount four all-candidates meetings at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Victoria's meeting will be in Central Junior Secondary, 1280 Fort, Saanich's in Mount View Senior, 3814 Carey, Esquimalt's in Esquimalt Junior 637 Head, and Oak Bay's in Oak Bay Senior, 2151 Cranmore.

Board Candidates Angered by Snub

School board candidates from Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich are indignant at being left out of all-candidates meetings Victoria Jaycees are sponsoring Thursday night.

Candidates for the Greater Victoria board are wondering why, with a budget more than five times bigger than the Oak Bay municipal budget, their views aren't as important as those of mayoralty and aldermanic candidates.

And several candidates supported a suggestion that, in future, separate meetings should be held for school board hopefuls so that the public can find out what they have to say.

It's too late now to hold special meetings for the trustee candidates. The all-candidates meetings will take place Thursday in Esquimalt, Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich, and all campaigns will have ended by Friday. Voters go to the polls Saturday.

★ ★ ★

Jaycee vice-president Gary Weir said today that sheer numbers of candidates for all public posts had forced the club to limit the Thursday forums to mayoralty and aldermanic candidates.

"I can't think of anything other than to hope the people can make a wise choice on the basis of what little they know about us," said Dr. Martin Scherzer, an orthodontist and one of seven candidates in the running for two vacant Victoria seats on the school district 61 board.

Most candidates are relying on newspaper advertisements, handbills, radio appearances or conversations with individuals to make themselves known.

Retired educator J. Lloyd Brereton, another candidate for a Victoria seat, said students could arrange for trustees to speak on panels at the schools. He said the students could insist their parents attend such meetings.

★ ★ ★

Others running for the Victoria seats include incumbent Dr. Victor Rodgers, housewife Mrs. Daphne Temple, retired radio operator Joseph Haegert, real estate man John H. Ledger and barber Leonard Stephenson.

In Oak Bay incumbent Peter Bunn and challenger Thomas Crone plan to attend a Project Learning meeting at Oak Bay Junior Secondary Thursday.

In urban Saanich, six candidates are contesting one vacant seat on the Greater Victoria board.

Purchasing officer Douglas Brown said not being invited to the all-candidates meeting will adversely affect his campaign because he didn't decide to run until the last minute.

Other candidates include apprentice drywaller John Fry, printer's assistant William Hibbert, management consultant Harold Knight, life underwriter Richard Reeve, and federal civil servant Joseph Rey.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please enlighten me whether one has to be a property owner in Victoria in order to vote in civic elections, or are apartment dwellers disenfranchised by a civic law? — T.R.

A. Apartment dwellers, or renters of homes are not disenfranchised. They can vote, but only if they take the time and trouble to register at the local municipal hall or, if they are already on the voters' list, re-confirm their address each year. Deadline for registering is the end of September. Each year, just before the deadline newspapers run stories and municipalities run a series of advertisements. If the stories, advertisement and deadlines were missed it is now too late to vote this year. The responsibility to ensure that a name is on the list belongs to the individual.

IT'S LIKELY TO HAPPEN

What Is Yellow and Wails?

Yellow fire trucks?

It's enough to send red-loving traditionalists to the wall.

But Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons is going to recommend the color change to the city fire wardens committee.

The reason: heavier traffic and the fact that red is not readily visible at night (begins to look black) and is confusing in day time because of so many other red vehicles.

Simmons said the change, if approved, will add to the safety of the public and of the firefighters.

"I got a study from Dave Campbell, city traffic engineer, that pastel is better than a dark color but yellow is best," he said.

To the yellow would be added black stripes at the rear — for emphasis.

City fire trucks need re-painting (in whatever color) in 1970, said Simmons, so he will recommend the color change then.

He also said that suburban Seattle communities have switched to yellow and in Toronto, police prowler cars have changed to yellow — with black stripes on the front and back.

Asked what he thought of white as a new color, he said the only problem is "we have a lot of fog and it fades in fog whereas yellow stands out."

Arthur Mayse . . .

MUCH AS IT PAINS ME to point this out, discrimination runs wild in Victoria each Sunday.

Consider the facts.

If music happens to be your kick, you can buy a ticket to a Victoria Symphony concert and enjoy the performance of paid musicians.

But you can't take in a paid-admission motion picture. No, no. Never on a Sunday.

Also, should this be your choice, you can pay green fees at any public golf course, and even though it's Sunday, the law won't bat an eye. Nor will it where the sale of gallery tickets to golf tournaments that bracket the Sabbath is concerned.

★

But, goofily, the promoter who charges fixed admission to a variety of spectator sports events may wind up in court.

This, to repeat, is discrimination. It gives some forms of paid entertainment carte blanche, while it penalizes others which are surely no less acceptable as Sunday relaxation.

★

This hypocritical measure has led to all manner of ridiculous evasions. The movie that begins a minute or two after Sunday midnight is one of them. Another is the game or entertainment for which no fee is officially charged. You don't pay to get in . . . you make a donation, with the tacit understanding that it will consist of a pre-arranged sum.

Or, if you are willing to take a chance, you sell tickets outright, and hope the law will turn its head the other way.

This double standard does no credit to the city that tolerates it. If we don't mean to apply the Sunday restriction across the board, we should lose no time in junking it.

Voters of four municipalities will decide the matter for their respective baliwicks at the polls on Saturday. As an opponent of blue Sunday laws I hope they will remove the ghostly hand of the Lord's Day Act from our necks.

It's been there too long. For honesty's sake as well as an end to petty and pointless restriction of legitimate enjoyment, I think we should be rid of it.

A WHILE AGO I TOLD you about Kelly Covin, the hard-working south Island writer who capped a run of television script sales to American networks by scoring with a novel in New York and Hollywood.

★

What I didn't get around to passing on is that Covin made a determined effort to woo the CBC into accepting scripts before he decided that his chances might be better to the south.

One of those TV tales was based on a Vancouver Island court case that posed a problem and raised an issue. Is the Indian entitled to the treaty-guaranteed hunting rights alloted to his ancestors, or is he bound by white man's game laws?

★

Covin pondered the episode, then used it as a springboard for a script which he mailed off to Canada's government-sponsored network. CBC, he says, kept the rejection score at 100 per cent by tossing the effort back at him.

Undaunted, Covin switched the background from Vancouver Island to Washington State, and sold his piece to a U.S. network for a very pretty penny.

The Indians whose deer-slaying sparked his interpretation? They won a reversal of the judgment against them on appeal.

Campbell Eyes Moscow As Vancouver Accepted

Buffalo Also Gets Berth; Western Loop Asks Million

NEW YORK (CP)—Vancouver and Buffalo teams join the National Hockey League next season, but the league expansion committee which announced the 1970-71 entries Tuesday is already looking forward to the possibility of a Moscow franchise for 1973-74.

"It could be the Moscow Dynamos versus the Montreal Canadiens for the Stanley Cup in either 1973-74 or 1974-75," league president Clarence Campbell said after Vancouver and Buffalo were conditionally accepted.

Each franchise cost $6,000,000, three times the amount paid by the six West Division teams that joined the league in 1967-68 to double its size to 12 clubs.

With 14 teams in the 1970-71 lineup, the NHL reshuffled the divisional setup, moving Chicago Black Hawks from the East to join St. Louis, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Oakland, Los Angeles and Minnesota in the West.

The two new entries join Toronto, Montreal, Detroit, New York and Boston in the East Division.

The Vancouver franchise goes to the Medicor Corp. of Minnesota on the condition that it complete acquisition of Northwest Sports Enterprises which own Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League and that it complete arrangements for a lease with Pacific Coliseum in Vancouver.

The Buffalo entry was awarded to Niagara Frontier Hockey Corp., a group headed by brothers Seymour H. and Northrup Knox.

The banker brothers will have to win formal approval by Buffalo city authorities to increase by the 1970-71 season the seating capacity of War Memorial Auditorium to a minimum of 15,000 seats. The NHL expansion committee also said that the hockey club will have to gain a lease satisfactory to the league and the city before Dec. 20, 1969.

Campbell said he was "extremely enthusiastic with the prospect of major league hockey in the two cities."

"I'm confident they will bring new and important strength to the league."

European Division May Be Next

Campbell said four more teams will be added in 1973-74, two for each division, and there is a possibility of adding a European division at the same time.

The Europeans would not compete during the regular season, but would meet for the world championship at the end of the regular NHL schedule.

Campbell said Moscow, Leningrad, Stockholm and Prague were leading candidates for the European entries.

STUMBLING BLOCK

Tom Scallen, head of the Minneapolis-based medical investment firm which also owns the Ice Follies, said he had no worries that the Vancouver club would meet the NHL conditions by the Dec. 20 deadline and be ready to move into the 78-game schedule next season.

Another stumbling block in Scallen's way, besides the $6,000,000 fee, is a $1,200,000 indemnity to be paid to the WHL.

Gene Kinasewich, president of the WHL, said in Seattle Tuesday that the NHL guaranteed Vancouver would pay the settlement for pulling out of the WHL. He said a meeting is planned next week to discuss the matter with Medicor and Vancouver.

RETAIN HIS OFFICES

Scallen, who will be president of the Vancouver franchise and its representative on the NHL board of governors, said he plans to retain his own offices in Minneapolis.

He said no decision had yet been made on whether the name Canucks would be retained for the team.

Joe Crozier, general manager of the Canucks and of Rochester Americans in the American Hockey League, said in Rochester that the Vancouver entry was "the greatest thing that's ever happened."

The club was ready to pay the $2,000,000 expansion fee in 1967-68 but were turned down in the bid. One reason the NHL sited for its rejection of Vancouver was lack of an adequate arena.

SALE ARRANGED

The Pacific National Exhibition Co. has since erected the 15,038-seat Pacific Coliseum. Scallen said the PNE has already voted to accept lease terms "and we've arranged to buy the club."

"I've always been associated with a winner and still want to be associated with a winner," he said in reference to a question on how the first-year team would fare.

The club has the advantage of starting out with 52 players in the Vancouver and Rochester system. The Buffalo interests are expected to absorb Buffalo Bisons of the AHL, which own only three players. The remaining Buffalo players belong to New York Rangers of the NHL.

The two new clubs will be able to pick up full rosters in a draft next June from the existing NHL clubs.

Cyrus McLean, Canuck president, said in Vancouver he was "very pleased" with the expansion announcement.

"This realization is a credit to my Vancouver associates, both past and present, for their dedication and perseverance to the cause of bringing major league hockey to another Canadian city. I cannot speak too highly of the co-operation of Medicor through president Tom Scallen and vice-president Lyman Walter in bringing this about.

"I am pleased to report that serving on the board of directors of the new organization, along with me, will be Max Bell, Frank McMahon, Coleman Hall, Scallen and Walters."

Referee John Smith follows action. Kennett, thwarted on this chance, scored on similar play as Cougars posted 5-3 B.C. Junior Hockey League decision over Centennials at Memorial Arena Tuesday.

Thought Really Counts With Cougars' Webster

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Shayne Webster isn't the fastest skater on the Victoria Cougar roster. Others stick-handle better, and Webster's shot can hardly be regarded as one of the better ones in the B.C. Junior Hockey League.

But Webster listens extremely well to his coach and his recent scoring successes should suggest something to the many hockey players who regard their own physical talents as infinitely more important than mental reasoning.

Thinking also counts, and Webster emphasized its value again Tuesday evening as the Cougars firmed their footing in first place by defeating Vancouver Centennials 5-3 at Memorial Arena.

The Shayner helped apply the shiner by scoring two goals and figuring in a third. None of the Cougars with better shots or greater skating ability matched that three-point effort.

HOT STREAK

It isn't a flash-in-the-pan thing because Webster now has counted nine goals in Victoria's last eight games. He scores because he passes and, more important, plays a positional and thinking man's game.

Because one good turn deserves another, the passes are returned . . . invariably when Webster positions himself in the "slot" — the vital area 10 to 20 feet directly in front of the opposition's goal.

The pair raised Webster's total to 11 goals, or almost treble the four-goal output he had last season.

Webster is the first to poke fun at his "wicked shot." But it is getting the job done for coach Doug Anderson, and that's no joke to rival netminders.

LEADING BY THREE

Bruce Cowick, Murray Kennett and Lonnie Miles scored Victoria's other goals before a turnout of 1,216 fans. Keray Wing, Rob Aquiline and Alex Dick scored for the slipping Centennials.

The team's eighth victory in 10 games restored Cougars' advantage over second-place Kamloops Rockets to three points. Third-place Vancouver remained a point ahead of Penticton but, by losing, conceded the Broncos an advantage of five games in hand.

Joining Webster in the starring role Tuesday were defenceman Gerry Bond and Kennett. Significantly, Webster and Bond were the goats on two Vancouver goals, but that appeared to be their only lapses.

Bond, consistently a standout on the road, played his best home game of the season. He hit, blocked shots extremely well and capped his evening by setting up two goals.

Kennett helped transform adversity into an advantage for Anderson. Beset by a 'flu problem, among his players, Anderson shifted Kennett from defence to centre ice.

Kennett came through with one of his best individual efforts, picking up an assist to go with his goal.

'Flu-stricken Greg Robinson and Chris Riddell sat out the game. Cowick played but the effect of the cold showed in his play.

Vancouver took six of the game's 11 minor penalties. Cougars' major failing, as it has been all season, showed when Victoria enjoyed manpower edge. Victoria held a two-man edge for one minute, 27 seconds in the second period but failed to cash in.

Part of the problem stems from the shooting habits of the point men. Although they get chances, the point men are almost reluctant to shoot. When they do fire, their shots are usually off the mark.

DEMONSTRATORS HALT MATCH AT ABERDEEN

ABERDEEN, Scotland (AP) — Anti-apartheid demonstrators invaded the field at Aberdeen's Linksfield Stadium Tuesday and stopped the rugby union game between the South Africans and North Scotland.

Play was held up for seven minutes while police struggled to clear the playing area.

The holdup was caused by about 30 demonstrators who ran onto the field and sat down. Two of them swarmed up one of the goalposts and stood on the crossbar, giving the Nazi salute.

The stoppage was the longest in any game played by the Springboks since their controversial tour of Britain began.

A police spokesman said 50 people were arrested.

Before the game, 1000 demonstrators marched through Aberdeen with banners shouting "racism out."

The South African team won the game 37-3.

Kings End Trip On Gayer Note

By The Canadian Press

Los Angeles Kings returned home today after travelling more than 7,000 miles in 19 days to pick up one victory and a tie in meetings with nine other National Hockey League teams.

The Kings' frustrating voyage ended on a slightly happier note Tuesday night when rookie Mike Corrigan scored on a breakaway in the third period to give Los Angeles a 4-3 victory over Oakland Seals.

The victory snapped a 10-game winless streak that started after Nov. 10 meeting with Toronto Maple Leafs in Los Angeles. The Kings beat the Leafs 6-3 that night but lost their next two games at home before starting the road trip which earned them just three points on a tie with the Leafs and the victory over the Seals.

Tuesday night's encounter saw the start of defenceman Harry Howell's 18th season.

The veteran rearguard, who collected 345 scoring points in 17 seasons with New York Rangers, scored his 346th point when he assisted on a goal by Oakland's Gary Jarrett.

HAD SPINAL FUSION

Howell underwent a spinal fusion operation last April to correct a back condition that bothered him for the last half of the 1968-69 season. The Rangers sold him to Oakland just before the June draft last summer and he started skating himself back into condition last month.

Nationals Square Tourney Record

MOSCOW (CP) — Canada and Sweden gained initial victories in the Moscow invitational hockey tournament Tuesday.

Canada evened its win-loss record in the eight-day competition at 1-1 by edging a tough East German team, 5-4, on defenceman Ken Stephanson's third period goal.

And Sweden, in its opening match, downed Finland, 7-5, in the only other game on the second day of the six-team tournament. It also was Finland's first game.

The Swedes, who led 3-1 at the end of the first period and 6-3 after the second, got two goals apiece from Lundstroem and Palmquist, with Wickberg, Abrahamson and Lind firing singles.

The Canadians rebounded from a 4-0 whitewashing by Czechoslovakia Monday.

Left-winger Billy Heindl scored two goals and Corby Adams one to lead the Canadians to a commanding 3-0 lead over East Germany in the first period. The East Germans amassed all four of their goals in the second period to a lone Canadian tally by Fran Huck.

Stephanson broke the deadlock in the third period on a weak shot that East German goalie Kolbe misjudged.

A crowd of only about 2,000 attended the game in Moscow's 14,000-seat Sports Palace.

Driving Ace Collects From Movie-Makers

LONDON (Reuters) — John Surtees, the only man ever to have won the world car-racing championship for both Grand Prix cars and motorcycles, today was awarded damages after successfully claiming he was libelled in the movie Grand Prix.

In the movie the private life of the main character, Jean-Pierre Sarti, leads to a dispute with Enzo Ferrari, chief of the Italian racing team, a British High Court justice was told today.

This aspect of the movie embarrassed Surtees and his wife, Patricia, because Surtees did have a dispute with Ferrari and left his team in 1966, Surtees' lawyers said.

But the row had nothing to do with the couple's private life, the justice was told.

The movie-makers, MGM, will pay Surtees damages for libel, and he has agreed to allow the movie to continue being shown, lawyers said.

A spokesman for MGM said the company had never intended to defame Surtees. He declined to name the amount of damages.

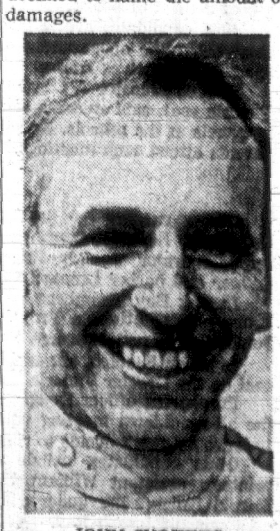

Argentina Leads Gold

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (Reuters) — Argentina and the United States shared the gold medals in the men's field events of the second Pan American Wheelchair Games Tuesday with Canada also in the bidding for silver and bronze medals.

Argentina leads the gold medal list with four while the U.S. has won two.

Silver medal winners for Canada were Gord Paterson of Toronto (two—Class III shot put, discus), Ralph Thibodeau of Lindsay, Ont. (Class I-B javelin) and Eugene Reimer of Abbotsford (archery).

Canada has a 29-member team at the Games.

Bill WALKER

And here are some football musings, or wouldn't it all have been simpler to have said that Frank Clair, coach of the year in Canadian football, out manoeuvred and outcoached Eagle Keys of Saskatchewan in the Grey Cup final. Yes, it most certainly would.

Because obviously the strategy that saw Russ Jackson go to his lesser luminaries on the pass was something Saskatchewan did not expect and did not relish.

Jackson virtually ignored the likes of Margene Adkins and Whit Tucker, his two prime receivers during the season.

And he used as his first line of support in the final fellows like little Ronnie Stewart, Jim Mankins and Jay Roberts. Jim Who? Mankins and Roberts, that's who. They caught eight of Jackson's tosses and when did that happen before?

And don't let that "Little Ronnie" bit about Stewart fool you. He's a heavyweight from the waist up.

And so Saskatchewan was outthought. But that's the difference between winning and losing, isn't it?

But whither now in the 1970 coaching stakes?

Will Frank Clair step up to the GM post at Ottawa and in doing so give up the coaching job, or will he handle both positions?

Will Jackie Parker work Edmonton against Vancouver and get the best deal possible, and end up by staying with the B.C. Lions?

Will Kay Dalton stay on at Montreal under new owner Sam Berger?

Who is in line for the big job at Winnipeg and an almost complete rebuilding program?

And if Parker says "no" to Edmonton, will Dave Skrien get another look? Will Johnny Bright have a chance? Or will assistant coach Ray Jauch have his application accepted?

After last week's guessing game ended in such a complete flop, it is dangerous to suggest that this week's will be any better. So be advised. However, with good blocking, perhaps some yards can be made.

●

The situation in Ottawa is that general manager Red O'Quinn is going to Montreal with Berger and he doesn't want Dalton as a coach. Dalton has two years remaining on a three-year contract, and that may make a difference, but not much.

Thus it would seem to follow in sequence that Clair will take over the GM post at Ottawa, which he admits he wants, and then he will step down as coach and appoint his assistant Jack Gotta in his place.

He is on record as saying that "Gotta would make a great coach."

At Montreal the image-makers are out in full force and the name to remember is Sam Etcheverry. Who can forget it? One of the greatest passers in history, Etcheverry apparently has the first refusal as the new head man.

He admits that he had an extensive meeting with O'Quinn Sunday night, "but that we didn't get a chance to talk much."

Double talk such as this makes sense, or as the Alouettes need a "name" as well as a coach for the new look under a new owner in 1970, Slingin' Sam could be the man. And likely will.

Out on the coast, naturally, the buzz is all about Parker. And it does seem safe to assume that he has two chances, which is one better than most.

●

The Vancouver situation he is well aware of, and has made his mark sufficiently clear that he should be able to satisfy all concerned. Granted this may be easier said than done (ask Jim Champion), but at Edmonton Parker would likely have to start with a clean slate. And this could prove to be his undoing.

More so because the two Edmonton assistant coaches of recent vintage, and under Neill Armstrong, obviously have designs on bettering their present status, and a Parker appointment undoubtedly would preclude such a possibility.

A new coach usually picks his own men. Past service means nothing.

Keys, it will be recalled, went from Edmonton, where he was fired, to Saskatchewan where he has put the Roughriders in the Grey Cup final in three of the past four years.

And now that Armstrong, who replaced Keys, has been released, will Skrien get an opportunity to prove himself all over again? He was successful twice with the B.C. Lions, once with a Grey Cup victory, and then found wanting at the same hitching post. He could get the job, and will offer a strong bid.

Or perhaps it could be that Jauch, coach of the Edmonton defensive backs and linebackers has the inside track. Edmonton's defence was the finest in the land this season past.

Bright? A great fullback, but not a head coach. Not yet. Not until he has served some time in the mill.

●

At Winnipeg, all sorts of names have cropped up, plus the suggestion that the Bombers will issue a call to the U.S. for someone to clean up the mess where Joe Zaleski failed.

Two who have been mentioned prominently, however, are Gotta, if he doesn't get the Ottawa job, and Bob Shaw. However, the field of probables appears wide open because general manager Earl Lunsford has put the blame for Winnipeg's demise this season, squarely on the coaching staff. Thus it appears highly unlikely that he will turn to either of the team's two assistant coaches this year, Joe Faragalli or Monte Irwin.

The indication follows that he might want to start completely from scratch.

So there you have it. Get your bets down early for the 1770 Broomball final in Toronto between the Argos and the Saskatchewan Roughriders.

And if you really want to know, those broomball shoes the Ottawa Rough Riders wore, have been described as having soles of spongy brown material that feels like wet liver.

NEW BRUNSWICK JOCKEY TIES RECORD WITH SIX WINS AT AQUEDUCT

Baby-Faced Rudy Has Big Day at Races

NEW YORK (CP) — A 19-year-old baby-faced jockey from New Brunswick wrote his name into New York track record books Tuesday by riding six mounts into the winners' circle at Aqueduct.

Rudolphe Leonide Turcotte, the youngest of the racing Turcottes of Grand Falls, N.B., became only the fourth jockey to post a six-winner day since pari-mutuels came to New York in 1940 by sweeping the last four races on the card.

After winning the last race of the day over a fast track, Rudy was greeted by a mixture of cheers and good-natured shouts of "foul."

The six wins, biggest spree in his young career, lifted his meeting-leading Aqueduct winning total to 42. Ron Turcotte, Rudy's 28-year-old brother, rode one winner during the day to boost his total to 32 and second place in the win column.

Noel Turcotte, 26, also is a jockey, racing at Toronto's Greenwood race track this year.

Rudy, who says he's dreamed of following his brothers into racing since he was 14, became the first jockey to win six races in a day since Mike Venezia did it at Aqueduct in 1964. Willie Shoemaker had six in 1959 at Belmont and Alfred Robertson did it in 1941 at the old Aqueduct track.

Young Turcotte prefers route races, especially on the grass, but is also quick at the gate with a speed horse.

One of his biggest boosters is his brother Ron.

"Rudy is strong," says Ron. "Of course, he has a lot to learn but he keeps his cool and bides his time over a distance of ground. You don't find many green boys who will do that."

But Rudy acknowledges that his brother's teaching has helped him succeed. The two view movies every morning at Aqueduct, studying the previous day's races.

"Ron does his own commentary for my benefit," says Rudy. "I learn a lot from that."

VIKING VIEWS

By Brian Butters

Several University of Victoria teams will be fighting for position in their respective leagues as they head into crucial games over the weekend.

Among those on the firing line will be the basketball Vikettes, the hockey Vikings and runners with the cross-country team. Those athletes, along with the soccer Vikings, are currently embroiled in battles for top spots.

Howie Tooby's Vikettes are having a bit of trouble getting themselves off the ground in their Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association women's basketball league as they suffer from a loss of shooting accuracy late in the game. Their record in WCIAA play is 2-2, but the girls are not playing up to their potential as shown last year when they swept through an undefeated season on the way to the WCIAA championship.

This weekend they play two games with the University of Alberta team at Edmonton. The girls must pull off a couple of victories if they are to remain in contention for top honors in the league.

Absent from the team when it travels to the prairies will be starters Gail Vaughan and Heather Wetzel. Miss Vaughan, who has been the team's leading rebounder in the season so far, has left the team due to academic pressures, while Miss Witzel will be away for three weeks in training for the Canadian national team which goes on tour to Cuba over the the Christmas holidays.

Uvic's hockey team will have its work cut out for it on Friday night as the Vikings go against Butler Brothers, with whom they share the lead in the Vancouver Island Hockey League. The game is worth four points in league standings, so the winner will have a fat cushion to rest on after the Esquimalt Sports Arena contest.

The Vikings will likely be looking for someone to hit to make up for the 13-1 drubbing handed them over the weekend by the UBC Thunderbirds. They managed to edge Butlers 3-2 in their only other meeting earlier this season.

Uvic's cross-country team will be on the march to Vancouver to compete in a B.C. Cross Country League race at S.F.U. With Larry Corbett and Charlie Thorne both in top form the team should place well up in the standings.

★ ★ ★

The basketball Vikings will have plenty of action this weekend as they play games on Friday and Saturday nights against Warner Pacific College from below the border.

The games will be on an exhibition basis as they were last year when the two teams split the series, each winning one. The Vikings will be confronted this year by a centre on the Warner Pacific team who stands seven feet tall. Steve Powell is the tall man's name and he, along with six-six Darryl Stroschine, will pose a threat to the Vikings on the boards and around the basket.

Also playing on the Warner Pacific squad will be outstanding rebounder Doug Lorenson. Both games will start at 8:00 at the Uvic gymnasium.

Also in action on the basketball court this weekend will be the Junior Varsity squad who tackle Vancouver CYO on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon. The Jayvees lost their first game of the season to Vancouver Killarney last weekend and will be hoping for revenge in their two games.

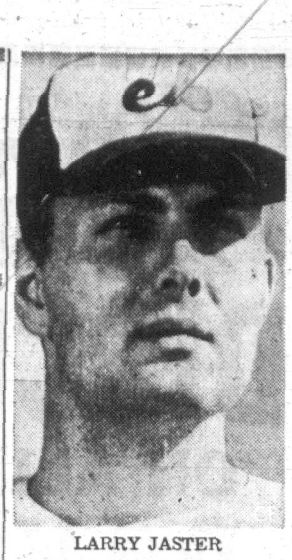

Their Saturday night game will be the prelim to the Viking's match while on Friday night the first game will be played between Mt. Douglas High School and Lake Cowichan.

The two first division rugby squads from the University will tangle in a league contest on Saturday with the first-place Vikings trying to extend their winning streak and the Norsemen fighting for a playoff spot.

The action should be hot and heavy as players try to win promotions to the first team and others try to retain those positions.

In second division play, the Saxons meet the Velox Rugby Club on Saturday in a game which will determine second place in league standings. The two teams are currently tied. The match goes at 2:00 at Lambrick Park in Saanich.

Expos Wheel and Deal At Baseball Sessions

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Montreal Expos were the most active of all major league clubs Tuesday as baseball's annual winter meetings concluded sessions at nearby Fort Lauderdale.

The National League club, Canada's first in major league baseball, completed the only trade of the day, hired a new coach and signed a working agreement with a new Triple-A farm team.

The Expos traded a starting pitcher, Larry Jaster, to Atlanta Braves for pitcher Jim Britton and Don Johnson, a catcher from Atlanta's farm system.

The Montreal entry also acquired the services of Dick Williams deposed manager of the American League's Boston Red Sox, as a third base coach to replace Dave Bristol and signed a one-year working agreement with Buffalo Bisons of the International League. Williams formerly managed Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League.

Jaster, an early selection in the expansion draft off the St. Louis Cardinals roster, had a disappointing record of one win and six defeats with an earned-run average of 5.49 for the Expos in 1969.

Britton, a 26 - year - old right-hander, appeared in 24 games, 13 as a starter with Atlanta. He completed a 7-5 won-lost record and compiled a 3.78 earned run average in 88 innings.

Johnson, 24, achieved a .280 batting average at Greenwood of the Class A Western Carolina League.

CLOSE TO DEAL

The Expos also were reported close to a deal with Detroit Tigers of the American League. Mentioned in the trade talk were pitchers Jerry Robertson of the Expos and Detroit's Joe Sparma.

While the traders sought to close deals left hanging Tuesday at Fort Lauderdale, club owners began tackling the problems of 1970 schedules, player relations and a reorganization proposal that could result in future concentration of power in the office of baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn and, ultimately, in realignment and inter-league play.

The owners were to start talks today with an informal joint session. Saturday, they will consider recommendations of a restructuring committee they set up after taking the commissioner's job from Gen. William D. Eckert in the surprise finish of last year's meetings.

Kuhn, named interim commissioner two months later, subsequently was given a seven-year contract to remain in the top job. He favors bringing the American and National Leagues under one roof in an effort to modernize the administration.

But the owners have disagreed on the extent of centralizing power.

Farmers Shatter Undefeated Skein

One string ran out while another continued along its unhappy course Tuesday night during Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League action at Central Junior High School.

Farmer Construction held off a second-half surge by Independents to snap the leaders' undefeated streak at nine games and chalk up a 68-66 victory.

In the other tussle, second-place Hotel Douglas closed to within six points of the lead by handing winless Century Inn its 10th loss, 69-63.

Gary Woodburn paced Farmers to a 39-29 half-time lead by pumping in 14 of his 21 points. Don Horwood collected 17 points for Farmers while Rick Humber added 15.

BURROWS IN ACTION

Independents charged from behind to within one point (67-66) with seconds remaining before Farmers' Dave Tooby sank a foul shot and the clock ran out.

John Lauvaas canned 22 points to pace Independents.

Hotel Douglas was strengthened by the addition of Bob Burrows, who was drafted by Seattle Super Sonics of the National Basketball Association but plans a career in baseball. The former Oak Bay High School star led Hotel Douglas with 21 points while Darrell Lorimer chipped in 20.

Wayne Allen paced Century with 20 points.

TAX BOARD CLIPS FLYING DOCTOR

OTTAWA (CP) — The tax appeal board has dismissed a Victoria doctor's claim for tax relief on the cost and operating expense of a light airplane.

Dr. William E. Newton, 3020 Valdez Place, told the board he bought the four-passenger plane in 1965 and flew it to keep himself experienced as a pilot.

He is one of four doctors in Victoria recognized by the federal transport department as qualified to undertake medical examinations of its pilots.

Dr. Newton said he earned $3,500 in medical examinations of pilots and pilot-trainees, but the board said this was only one eighth of his income from general medical practice.

•

"There is no doubt that appellant used his plane for a hobby and for the use of his family," said board member Roland St. Onge in his written judgment.

"Keeping himself experienced in the aviation field so as to become more competent to issue medical certificates to would-be pilots and pilots renewing licences is too far-fetched a claim and, in no way whatsoever, could justify the purchase and upkeep of the aircraft."

Dr. Newton's claim of more than $3,700 as operating, interest, and depreciation expense on the aircraft was disallowed.

Boys' Club to Spread 10,000 Clothing Bags

Members of the Boys' Club of Victoria will distribute 10,000 empty Goodwill clothing bags in Victoria and Oak Bay Saturday.

Goodwill Enterprises is putting on a special beat-the-winter appeal for used clothing, and some 200 members of the Boys' Club are organizing and operating the drive.

Those with clothing to donate can leave bags in a Goodwill box or telephone a Goodwill pickup truck.

SEVERE WEATHER

Object of the special drive is to build up a stockpile of donated materials to tide the non-profit organization over the winter months.

"Last winter's severe weather saw us running at a heavy financial loss, as we depend entirely on this donated material to sustain Goodwill's job-training program," said manager Robert Dudley.

All materials donated to Goodwill are cleaned and repaired by handicapped workers and trainees at the rehabilitation centre on Bay Street.

Drinking Costs Youth $335 Fine

Tapani J. Leivo, 18, Work Point Barracks, was fined $335 in court Tuesday for impaired driving, driving without a licence and operating a motor vehicle as a minor without insurance.

He was also prohibited from driving in Canada for four months.

Leivo collided with another vehicle on the Johnson Street bridge Oct. 31.

SPEAKS OUT

To Victoria

Not too many years ago the Provincial Government brought in legislation setting up Regional Districts throughout the Province. We have one in our Victoria region . . . the Capital Region District.

The Regional Board has the responsibility of tackling major regional programs such as development and co-ordination of the sewage disposal program within the region, acquisition of Regional Parks, providing and co-ordinating Regional Health Services, carrying out Regional Planning and implementing a Regional Hospital Program.

Why regional and not local? Despite dishonest attempts to show otherwise, we are but one community. Our historic municipal boundaries really have no relationship now to the growth pattern of Greater Victoria. What happens across the street in another municipality is of concern to all Victorians.

The sewer program is an example of the need to co-operate and help the fight against pollution and safeguard against the prospect of disease.

The Hospital program so urgently required needs a regional non-parochial approach. Taxpayers in Saanich, Oak Bay, Esquimalt and all the other municipalities will actually contribute to the cost of building our new hospital beds. The Regional Parks program means that all of the sites we Victorians call ours will belong to us regardless in which municipality or district they are found. To the boy or girl in Fairfield the Sooke Pot Holes or Elk-Beaver Lake are as much his or hers as the Dallas Road waterfront.

Regional planning will result in the co-ordination for a better development and growth of the region. It does not mean that local planning will be eliminated. Our city planning department will continue to serve the needs of the city, determine where the apartments shall be built, the shops and markets located, and the commercial and industrial areas permitted. The right of each person to be heard at public meetings will remain.

We have a total of 94 square miles of suitable land in our region for development purposes. Of these, 32 square miles are urbanized. If we continue to develop the remaining 62 square miles in the same manner we could end up with a population of 750,000.

Much of what we do now and together as members of one community will determine much of our future.

On Saturday in Victoria

CYC Shock Troops Shocked Too Many Too Often

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Three years ago field volunteers of the Company of Young Canadians marched on the cities and towns as shock troops in the war on poverty.

The Liberal government of Lester B. Pearson declared the war and the 27th Parliament voted in 1966 to send the company to carry it out.

SAULNIER
. . . seeks scapegoat?

"If the CYC is to be a success, it must create a disturbance," said John Reid, then 29 and the youngest MP. "I wish these volunteers well as they go out on this noble experiment."

Last month, with the noble experiment a distinct disturbance to Montreal, Mr. Reid was leading the Commons broadcasting committee in an inquiry into the CYC.

As the month-long inquiry ended last Friday, he was among those who felt the company must be brought under government control to rein its radical elements.

MAY ALTER COMPANY

The committee, in private meetings this week, has decided against disbanding the company but may alter it so radically it will never be the same.

That the committee has doubts about how to treat the "noble experiment" is evident. MPs know very well that altering the power structure within the CYC may kill it as effectively as any disbandment.

"This is the toughest thing I've tackled," said Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) Tuesday night, reflecting committee doubts.

Mr. Reid, the committee chairman, said MPs are reluctant to come to a decision.

Few give much credence to the testimony of Lucien Saulnier, Montreal executive committee chairman whose allegations of subversion last month spurred the inquiry.

WANTS A SCAPEGOAT

Mr. Saulnier last week demanded that the CYC be disbanded and a royal commission be established to inquire into subversion. Connecting the CYC with "a plan" to overthrow the established order, he asked why the federal government is paying a group to destroy the system.

However, a strong committee viewpoint is that Montreal wants to make the CYC the scapegoat for the harsh problems that have beset the city.

The Montreal group was able to connect no more than 12 to 15 volunteers with illegal activity and earlier evidence indicated that these have been weeded out of the CYC.

Philip Givens (L—York West), former Toronto mayor, drew an outraged response from the Montreal delegation when he asked whether it was being frank. Pierre de Bane (L—Matane) said Mr. Saulnier appeared to be showing his age in his remarks about the CYC.

Other MPs have been even more scathing in private.

When Mr. Saulnier was asked whether Montreal would accept a CYC not involved in these matters, the reply was negative. Montreal didn't want a federal agency meddling in its affairs, period.

MPs have also found it difficult to swallow the CYC's disregard for constitutional jurisdictions. But they have been swayed by CYC claims that fences can't be respected in warfare.

CYC WANTS CHANGE

"There's a difference between social service and social change," said Skip Hamling, a CYC council member, in an interview. "We are interested in changing the system.

"They want us to hold some slum person's hand. We want to turn that hand into a fist."

That is the rhetoric that frightened not only Montreal but some provinces and federal MPs.

The MPs asked why the company didn't seek municipal or provincial permission before going into an area.

The reply was that anyone with a really serious problem might not welcome a group that would expose it.

"Obviously a municipality that is running a bad show does not want anyone in there who might stir up the natives a bit,"

GIVENS
. . . asks frank question

said CYC council chairman Jack Johnson.

"If consultation were mandatory it would limit the value of the company."

A Montreal MP produced a pamphlet from a Montreal CYC project attacking "the old parties" and saying they should be replaced by "true representatives of the people" if they won't listen to public demands.

RHETORIC TYPICAL

CYC council vice-chairman Jean Roy said the rhetoric was fairly typical of a citizen's committee or tenant's group newly aware of politics.

"They all show the same howling discontent."

The Lesser Slave Lake, Alta., CYC project, in which mink farmers were angered by CYC attempts to get Indians fishing rights, also was linked with Montreal.

Doug Ward, 31 a moderate New Leftist who was chairman of the CYC provisional council for three years, almost the company's lifetime, said Mr. Saulnier's allegations of subversion amounted to a red herring to get the company off his back.

"I think there are people in Montreal (the CYC) who are working with the equivalent of the Metis, and the mink farmers are not happy," Mr. Ward said.

"I think that anyone in Mr. Saulnier's job, and other people who have worked in civic government, know the extent to which you can get involved with developers because they are around all the time.

"And citizen's groups can be a pain in the neck."

Mr. Ward said the CYC works on the causes of problems.

"With the company there, there is more chance of conciliation because by and large their training is more toward non-violent change.

"I hope there is still some credibility left for non-violent change, although it seems to have gone out of style south of the border and perhaps here as well at times."

Even State Secretary Gerard Pelletier, in saying the CYC must be publicly accountable, wondered how long the Canadian "honeymoon" may last.

"We are fortunate in that our problems have not as yet overwhelmed us," Mr. Pelletier said.

This worries MPs almost as much as the rhetoric—that deeper social explosions may be in store unless bodies like the CYC let off the steam now.

'Two Sides To a Coin'

By ELIZABETH FORBES

This was the day I intended to give you my usual December run-down on the flowers still blooming in our gardens (tra la). However, I've had enough telephone calls commending me for presenting a few of the late Lance Whittaker's views on characteristics needed in a new member of civic government and some of the hazards that may confront such a person, I've decided to do a follow-up for you instead.

Forbes

In a series written five years ago for one of his area weeklies, Whittaker made it clear that a man or woman looking for civic office should first have a working knowledge of the Municipal Act and second, some familiarity with the sources and availability of municipal funds.

He then went on to list an area that could prove a hazard for such a persons, that is in ascertaining what the electorate expects of its representatives.

★ ★ ★

All too often, Whittaker wrote, a new candidate for council is pushed forward by those who have some specific policy or action in mind. The candidate is the vehicle by which this change is to be brought about.

"Upon election, the new man or woman, becomes aware of two facts overlooked in the excitement and enthusiasm of the campaign. First, he or she is only one of a group that makes up council and secondly, the cause which he (or she) had honestly believed to have overwhelming majority support suddenly has powerful logical arguments on the other side."

This outstanding newspaperman then explained that the shock arises from the fact "that few of us actually have the analytical type of mind which sees all sides of a question, and that a one-sided view almost always prevails where a cause is taken up by a group."

Once on council however, the new man (or woman) soon learns that all issues have many sides. They learn too, "that what appears to be a majority view can turn out to be something quite different."

Then, in one of the articles, Whittaker listed a few of the ways in which a newcomer to council learns these things.

"They learn when they examine petitions on both sides of a question—and find the same names on both petitions."

"They learn when they move to assist a particular group which seems to have a favorable argument only to find an equal and opposite reaction generated in another group of taxpayers."

★ ★ ★

They learn by hearing criticism of council action on all sides, but seldom an approving word."

This is not to say that a candidate should not have a particular goal, or several specific planks in his or her platform. "But no member of council is doing his or her duty who restricts interest and activity to a single objective."

"Even the one who approaches every question with 'let's keep the mill rate down' can become extremely tiresome, and a heavy drag on municipal progress, laudable as his or her intentions may be."

The Whittaker series then pointed out that "the newly elected neophyte, particularly if he (or she) is a crusader, should be forewarned.

Such a person "will find that council, far from being ignorant or obdurate about the newcomer's particular project, has probably subjected it to searching objective inquiry. If there has been a lack of action, there are probably good reasons for it, reasons which, all to often, the newcomer finds his group were unaware of, or have themselves ignored."

Now to get back to the flowers that bloom in Victoria gardens in December.

If you have something unique, 'something different, or just a few of the hardier varieties still in flower, do telephone me before Saturday morning. Then I'll write Monday's column.

UNDERWATER LAB FINISHES TESTING

Aegis 'First Ocean Village'

By RUTH YOUNGBLOOD

HONOLULU (UPI) — An underwater laboratory may pave the way toward "inhabited villages on the ocean floor."

Gosta Fahlman, general manager of the Makapuu Oceanic foundations' test range, was talking about the Aegis, an undersea laboratory designed to support six scientists working on the ocean bottom for two weeks without re-supplying.

The Aegis — named after the Norse god of the sea, will become "an underwater home for people whose work requires that they stay on the ocean floor," for extended periods, Fahlman said, and is expected to be ready this month for leasing to those needing it.

22-MAN STAFF

It is the first underwater laboratory to be available on a year-round basis with a 22-man staff and equipment ready to go at any time.

Fahlman said such a laboratory is needed for underwater research just as test stations were needed for space work.

The 70-foot-long portable habitat, costing almost $1 million, consists of two pressurized sausage-shaped cylinders joined by a control sphere in the centre.

One of the cylinders contains laboratory facilities, the other living quarters including bunks, an infrared oven for heating food and a freezer.

"There's a space for eating, sleeping, relaxing and work," Fahlman said. "The temperature is kept warm enough for a shirt and shorts, and a hatch at the bottom allows the scientists to go into the water and bring back to the lab any samples they want to study."

PRACTICAL TEST

Tests with men in the laboratory under water for several days confirmed that it is comfortable and practical.

"It is technically reasible that the Aegis could become the predecessor of inhabited villages on the ocean floor," Fahlman said.

"If there is a demand for people to move to the ocean," he said, "such villages could become reality in 20 to 50 years. We have the technology to start building them now."

Television cameras and window glass keep the scientists in the Aegis in constant touch with the underwater world, and other television cameras inside keep the men in constant view of a control centre.

The cylinders composing the laboratory are fixed crossways on a catamaran pontoon. Once towed out to sea, the hulls of the pontoon are flooded for submerging, to a 580-foot maximum depth and pumped out for resurfacing.

IT'S A BOY FOR JOAN BAEZ

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — Folksinger Joan Baez Harris gave birth to a son Tuesday night at the Stanford University Hospital. The boy weighed seven poinds four ounces. Mrs. Harris, 28, said she hopes to take the child to the Safford, Ariz., federal prison camp at Christmas to visit his 23-year-old father, David Harris. He is serving a sentence for refusing induction into the army.

From HAROLD GROOS, CANDIDATE FOR ALDERMAN

To the Electors in Oak Bay:

I am a candidate for the next Oak Bay Council because I believe our municipality has reached a stage of development where we could lose much too much of those remaining assets which we all cherish. I hold strong views against both the dangers of "over-building" and "pollution."

Most of us want Oak Bay to continue as a place where an overwhelming portion of the residents are homeowners living in single family dwellings, we do not want our municipality to be taken over by tenants in apartments. To prevent this happening I want to see the utmost restraint exercised in granting building permits for new apartments.

There is no need to zone any more of our land for apartments because there is plenty of such land already zoned and awaiting redevelopment.

When considering applications to redevelop sites which are already zoned for apartments we must be exceptionally careful to ensure that existing services are not going to be overloaded. Also, if new apartments are to be built, it would be good policy to give priority to the condominium type of development because all their occupants would have an equity interest in keeping them up and in the progress of our municipality.

While on the subject of rezoning I regret last Council's decision to allow a new shopping centre on Foul Bay Road because it will overload that thoroughfare and could detract from our Oak Bay Village which we should be concerned with seeing grow into a truly prestige shopping locale.

PLEASE REMEMBER:

Off-Shore Drill Ban Restated by Davis

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said in the Commons Tuesday there is no way his department will agree to off shore oil drilling in the Strait of Georgia between Vancouver Island and the British Columbia mainland.

The statement was an immediate response to a question by Liberal backbencher Douglas Hogarth (New Westminster) who asked both Davis and Energy Minster J. J. Greene about the issue.

Greene said any oil company that might wish to drill for oil in the strait must apply to several government departments, including fisheries, and that the energy department would not issue a permit without unanimous consent. So far, he said, no applications have been made.

Greene also denied a suggestion by New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas that the government may have already committed itself to off-shore oil drilling by granting permits for seismic testing in the strait. The test, conducted in the past year, could disclose geological conditions indicating whether oil is likely to have accumulated beneath the sea bed.

Greene added that seismic testing has been carefully watched by energy department officials and the oil companies had agreed not to use dynamite for test purposes.

Greene is going to Washingto Thursday to confer with U.S. Interior Secretary Walter Hickel on the question of that country's oil-import policy.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1969 —PAGE 33

Mrs. John Di Castri helps Mayor Hugh Stephen cut the ribbon on the Victoria Hostel For Girls, which was officially opened Tuesday. The home will house 12 girls from the ages of 16 to 20 until they become students or until they are able to find suitable jobs and other adequate accommodation. (Irving Strickland Photo)

Victoria Hostel for Girls Opens

By REG SILVESTER

The opening of the Victoria Hostel for Girls Tuesday brought a mixture of feelings.

For the housemother, Mrs. Barbara Evans, the social function was a bit nerve-wracking. She was looking forward to the first girls moving in, and getting on with the job.

Mrs. John A. Di Castri, the chairman of the hostel's directors, went to a gathering of friends after the opening saying she felt 15 years younger and 38 pounds lighter.

To Mrs. Harold Beckwith, walking around the old house at 1423 Fernwood was a nostalgic trip.

The house was built by former Victoria mayor J. L. Beckwith, whose son she married. She had spent much time there before 1927, and remembered the Cadillac that used to sit in the garage.

And she remembered the large coal and wood stove which sat in the middle of the kitchen, now remodelled into a suite for the hostel housemother.

The house was sold during the depression shortly after her mother-in-law's death, for $4,000, and had been used as an apartment building.

The house was about the fifth the hostel board members had looked at, and they knew with remodelling it would serve well.

The hostel will house up to 12 girls who need a temporary place to stay while looking for jobs or getting job training.

It won't handle delinquent girls, unwed mothers or girls with serious problems. They're not equipped to handle that, said housemother Mrs. Evans.

What they will try to do is to provide a home-like atmosphere for girls referred to them by the social welfare department.

The time they are allowed to stay will be flexible, Mrs. Evans said, but three months was mentioned as a maximum. By that time they will have become either students or workers, with a better chance to find decent accommodation on their own.

With a crowd of people clustered outside on the lawn listening, Mrs. Di Castri said the hostel is evidence that "Christian charity" still exists in Victoria. It is an example of how people "join forces for the common good."

Later, she said she was proud of what has been accomplished.

Mayor Hugh Stephen, before cutting the ribbon to officially open the hostel, said the house was "essentially the work of compassionate individuals."

The driver of a garbage truck passing by stopped to listen for a while, then left, drowning out part of Stephen's speech.

When the truck had gone, Stephen gave Mrs. Di Castri his personal cheque for $100 toward the hostel and snipped the ribbon.

Then the people were ushered in over floors sheathed with polyethelene to protect them from oil people might track in. (Paving was going on across the street.)

They went upstairs, admired the wood panelling along the staircase, checked out the bedrooms, went down the back stairs, peeked into the housemother's office, walked through the kitchen, then settled down to talk in the living room.

There were 500 biscuits and coffee in plastic cups. Mrs. Di Castri said the refreshments cost all of $5.

Someone donated a food blender and left it on the table in the dining room. Luckily, no one turned it on. Somehow, as people passed by it, pouring themselves coffee, it collected about $150.

Housewife Finds Challenge Starting as President

NEW GLASGOW, N.S. (CP) — After 25 years as a housewife Marguerite MacGregor has a new career and, what's more, she has started at the top—as president of a manufacturing firm.

The Steel Furnishing Co. Ltd., and its division, MacGregor Bedding, is a family company, started in 1904 by her husband's father, George H. MacGregor.

Mrs. MacGregor said that when her husband John died some 10 months ago she didn't want to see the company fold or be sold to a competitor who might close it down to gain a stronger hold on the Atlantic market. Some of the employees had been working for the company for up to 35 years.

She decided she would keep it going, and that would give her something to work and live for.

"It's a challenge, and I couldn't have done it without the calibre of employees this company has."

Mrs. MacGregor said she never talked over the business with her husband. "I didn't even know what his salary was."

TRAINED AS TEACHER

Before her marriage, she studied at the Montreal School of Fine Arts and trained to be a teacher at Macdonald College at St. Anne de Bellevue, Que.

A Montrealer, she wanted to teach art, but there were no openings when she was looking for work in the depression years. She joined a rubber company and worked on the employees' magazine. Later, during the Second World War, she helped design footwear.

Her husband, an electrical engineer, took over the family business in 1950, and they moved to New Glasgow.

In the years between the move and her husband's death, Mrs. MacGregor was busy bringing up their daughter, now 19 and a third-year arts student at Dalhousie University in Halifax. She also worked for community projects and had time for sewing and some arts and crafts.

The company she now heads makes mattresses and steel beds, furnaces, iron railings, household furnishings and other steel products.

She confessed she knew little about steel or manufacturing when she took over the company. However, she said, she relies heavily on her employees and George Woolaver, the general manager, who runs the business for her.

She is planning now to expand the bedding division to meet increasing demands. In addition to serving the Atlantic market, the company does "good business" with Caribbean countries, and has had inquiries from European and African countries.

Mrs. MacGregor is also thinking of advertising in the Atlantic provinces, something her father-in-law was "dead against."

He believed that money that might go into advertising would be better used in manufacturing the product.

"The company is well established—everybody knows the name of MacGregor," she said, "but competition is becoming keener."

THE ALUMNAE

"When I was that age I had trouble finding myself, too, and then one day, alas, I found me."

Guild Honors Mrs. Lewis

The Women's Guild of St. David's-by-the-Sea honored long-time president Mrs. K. M. Lewis with the gift of a typewriter at the 25th annual Christmas bazaar and tea recently.

The presentation was made by Mrs. A. P. Williams.

Proceeds from the bazaar totalled more than $400. The bazaar was opened by Mrs. Franck Patterson.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Many-Legged Lion Banishes Boredom

By PENNY SAVER

The woman down the street was actually humming as she angled the cart out of the stack at the front of the store.

"Let me guess—Milly's mysterious virus is vanquished," I said.

"Wrong. The doctor gives it another week. But a co-existence treaty has been declared. Mostly Milly was bored and she amused herself by tearing my nerves to shreds. But Grandma saved the day with a bit of imagination."

As we wandered through the shelves, my neighbor told me about Chudleigh the lion.

"He came in pieces, in a kit that cost $3.49. The kit contained all sorts of yarn, a styrofoam ball to shape his head and felt features.

"With a bit of help from Grandma, Milly put Chudleigh together, and braiding the heavy yarn to make his multitude of legs increased her skill in that direction immensely.

"Now Chudleigh is her friend: She claims he tells her stories, and the other day when I brought in her lunch she was teaching him to spell. By now he should be a whizz at new math."

The lion is only one of six friends that can be made from these kits. All are "octopussy" with a round head, felt features and many braided legs. Other designs include a lamb, a clown, a panda and a multi-hued spaceman.

Speaking of boosting the imaginative process, I saw some attractive hand puppets for $2 that could be gathered together for quite a spectacular show.

Made in West Germany, these puppets have sturdy wooden heads and cloth bodies. They are dressed to represent standard characters such as an Indian, a clown or a Dutchman.

Puppets Wriggle

Also for $2, are furry little puppets that look like kooky gloves. A ribbed cuff is at the wrist and the mouth is made like a mitten thumb.

Pieces of felt attached to the colorful fake-fur back gives the puppet some identity while the hand wriggling around inside gives it life. The eyes are made of that plastic screen stuff that seems to move when it is tilted back and forth.

"I knew my son was squandering his allowance on sweets," said Gladys," so we made a deal. We worked out how much he could reasonably need each week and agreed he could save a dime a day. Just to make sure he didn't cheat (and this was his own idea, too) I got him a little bank that automatically advances the date and the amount inside when a dime is inserted.

"The dials are set, then when the first coin goes in the whole thing locks and won't open until the bank is full. If the day on the bank doesn't agree with the day of the week, I know his budget is overspent."

These little banks cost 69 cents and are decorated with designs for both girls and boys.

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

Built next to the kitchen, this family room serves as a dining room also. The skylight keeps it and the kitchen from becoming gloomy. (Jeremiah Bragstad Photo)

TRY THIS

By PAULINE GRAVES

House Grows With Family

As a family changes, so does the house. Surely the needs of a toddler differ from those of a teen-ager, and not just in his own room furnishings, but also in the way that the whole house and the family functions.

One staple of today's homes that seems to be enduring through these changes is the family room. Most new homes include such a room in the original design, and in remodels the addition most prevalent is the family room.

Shown here is just such an addition, by architect Adolph Roskrans, which was built on to the house next to the kitchen. The unusual features that lift this family room above the ordinary are the high ceiling, the heavy beams and the large skylight.

ADMITS LIGHT

The high ceiling gives the room spaciousness, the beams make for handsome design and the skylight permits plenty of light to come into what would have been a dark area of the room, and into the kitchen as well.

Because family dining takes place here, the counter that separates the kitchen and family room has storage for dinnerware, table silver and linens, all opening into the family room. The counter top is used not only for work, but for serving as well. And another good idea is the wide, raised hearth that travels the length of the room. Its height and width provides extra seating space, great for parties.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Lover More Tolerant

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Now please don't get me wrong, I am not knocking my bride, I am only telling you this so you can make a fair judgment. Before Mary (not her real name) and I were married we stayed together in plenty of motels over week-ends and like that. She seemed to be satisfied with me, but right after we got married, Mary decided that my snoring drove her nuts, and she couldn't sleep in the same room with me. So now I have to go sleep on the couch in the other room. This is not like I pictured married life.

We can't afford a two-bedroom apartment as yet, but Mary says that is the next step. Maybe I'm wrong, but if my snoring didn't drive her nuts before we were married, how come it drives her nuts now?—Sleeping Alone

DEAR SLEEPING: Maybe your snoring did "drive her nuts" before you were married, but not quite "nuts" enough for her to send you to separate sleeping quarters. Lovers seem able to tolerate far more than married folks.

DEAR ABBY: I am 24 and just got out of prison. I pulled my time but none of my so-called friends will have anything to do with me. I've thought of moving to a new town, but they say that running away is not the answer.

What should I do, Abby? I trust you, and will look for your answer.—No Saint

DEAR NO SAINT: I don't know who "they" are, but "they" could be wrong. In order to start life over with a clean slate, perhaps it would be better to go to new surroundings where you are not known. Old friends are frequently the worst for one who has pulled time. I vote for a move, and new friends. And good luck.

DEAR ABBY: Why are people so mean? My daughter is in a home for unwed mothers. The baby is due soon and everybody knows where she is, and who got her pregnant.

So why is it that everywhere I go, friends and relatives have to ask, "How is she? When is the baby due? Is she going to keep the baby?"

Abby, I have nearly cracked up over this, and am under psychiatric care right now. I am told to put it out of my mind. How can I when people keep reminding me?

I am sure the daughters of these people are no better than mine. It's just that mine got caught.

It hurts enough knowing I will never be able to hold my first grandchild, and I can't sleep at night for wondering who will get it and raise it.

Please say something to help me. Or tell everybody else to keep their big mouths shut! Sign me—Miserable

DEAR MISERABLE: Avoid all those who have been so cruel and tasteless as to mention your daughter's present situation. If someone brings up the subject, cut him or her off in mid-sentence saying you don't care to discuss it. And if necessary, walk away.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"Do we want to buy combination screens and storm windows for our entire house at a ridiculously low price?"

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer:

Help! Where do I place the bustline darts when they take the bra off?—Mrs. "X".

Dear Mrs. "X":

Thanks for giving me my laughs for the day—a little humor in our sewing is bound to make it happier.

Naturally, with the more natural look in undergarments, the darts also will change in construction. You will find more and more patterns without the conventional type darts but slight shaping in the construction seams instead.

There is no way I can tell you how much anyone will have to lower their darts because each individual's measurements will differ. But, I would say the darts will have to be lowered at least one inch. I might further add that if you would have to lower the darts more than one inch, you would probably look better in your clothes if you wore some sort of undergarments with more support.

These new styles aren't made for everyone. They are a young look and unless you have a young looking figure, don't throw all caution to the winds.

Sensational New Hearing Aid Costs Less Than 10 Cents Per Year To Operate

Space age technology has come to the hearing aid industry. A new hearing aid has been developed that actually costs less than ten cents per year to operate. This is a far cry from the $25 to $70 a year the average hearing aid costs to run. Aid also automatically controls speech interfering noises and can be custom adjusted for correct hearing on the spot. For information write SILVERTONE HEARING AID CENTRE, Simpsons - Sears Hillside: 3190 Shelbourne Street, Victoria.

Sunday Slowly Fading As Traditional Day of Rest

By MIKE WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sunday is becoming less and less a day of rest for Canada's retail merchants, although the change is coming slowly in some areas.

For many, it is a day for business as usual. Some say it is even a bit unusual because of heavy volume.

It has been traditional that the smaller convenience-type stores have remained open on Sundays. But now there is a move in this direction by some larger stores in the supermarket class.

The trend is most widespread in the Toronto area but it exists elsewhere to lesser degree although it is by no means general across the country.

The president of one large supermarket chain says flatly that if he is forced to open Sundays to meet the competition it will mean higher food costs for the consumer.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows a wide mixture of reaction to Sunday shopping.

LAWS CONFUSING

There is vocal and organized opposition from some religious groups that the traditional Christian Sunday should not become another day of commercial activity.

Some labor leaders are worried that workers will lose a day off. Large store owners who haven't joined the trend complain that those who do operate Sundays are cutting into their sales.

The legal situation also is a confusion of federal, provincial and municipal regulations.

A Montreal shopper who went to a dairy product store one Sunday to buy a bottle of window cleaner was told he couldn't get it because the article was a "grocery."

"We can sell you dog food, but we can't sell you food for the baby," he was told.

Federally, the Lord's Day Act makes it illegal—with stated exceptions—to "sell or offer for sale" any goods or property on Sundays.

The exceptions, generally, are those considered "works of necessity and mercy."

EXCEPTIONS GRANTED

The act provides for fines up to $45 for individuals, to $100 for employers, and to $250 for corporations, with subsequent offences up to $500 each.

The provinces can grant exceptions to the act, some have their own Lord's Day regulations, and many municipalities also have bylaws on shopping hours.

The exceptions to the act permit smaller shops such as milk stores to remain open, and generally across the country they do.

A look at the situation across the country:

British Columbia

General manager Ray E. Hunt of the B.C. Retail Merchants Association says some large stores remain open Sunday allegedly "for viewing only," but business actually is transacted. The association opposes the trend to Sunday shopping, saying that public demand for extension of shopping hours is "a myth" created by those interested in making a profit.

Prairies

Sunday shopping is not widespread, so there is little organized opposition. Clifford Chow owner of an Edmonton supermarket, says he doesn't think chain grocery stores would consider staying open Sundays because the cost of operation would not be covered by sales.

In Regina, smaller stores such as tobacco stores and confectioneries operate, and there are the occasional larger ones who open for Sunday business. One store operator who does open says he does it as a convenience to his customers. "You have to look after your neighborhood."

In Winnipeg, there is an active group concerned with the wider question of uniform closing hours during the week.

Ontario

A growing number of big supermarkets have started to remain open on Sunday in the rich Metropolitan Toronto market. One has been fined $250, but continues to operate. Charges are laid only if there are complaints from the public and the attorney-general finds there is opposition in the neighborhood.

Opposition to Sunday shopping has formed under a group called the Lord's Day Alliance which gained support from the Canadian Council of Churches for a brief to the provincial government.

The brief asked that the province take stronger steps in enforcing the Lord's Day Act and that the government enact new laws to prevent stores authorized to sell essential items on Sunday from also selling non-essential items.

Premier John Robarts told the legislature he will not allow a "wide-open Sunday." Attorney-General Arthur Wishart has asked a law reform commission to study the matter, and agreed with an Opposition member who said society is rejecting the observance of Sunday as a religious holiday and that other criteria must be used in deciding what should be permitted on that day.

Quebec

Sunday hours are part of a larger controversy over store closing hours, especially those of food stores, at any time of the week.

Present regulations are on a local basis but the Quebec legislature is studying a law to regulate hours on a province-wide basis.

Steinberg's Ltd. fought a Montreal-area law setting hours.

Gordon Kelly of the chain's public relations department said: "We feel that if enough customers want to be served at 2 a.m., we should be able to serve them at 2 a.m. We believe it's the customer who dictates closing hours, not the government."

He said he didn't know of any demand for Sunday shopping.

Montreal-area stores operating on Sunday are not allowed to sell "groceries," but the definition is nebulous although it includes most canned goods. Merchants say a close check is kept on their operations, and fines are not uncommon.

A spokesman for the Retail Clerks Union said the union does not care if a store violates the closing hours unless a union worker is involved. Uusually they are not, because unionized employees work for the larger chains which observe the laws.

Atlantic

The Saint John, N.B., Merchants Association says there is no Sunday shopping of consequence. Under provincial regulations small grocery stores with no more than three employees may remain open on Sundays.

In Halifax stores within specified limits may remain open on Sundays with a city permit.

In Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland, provincial regulations ban the larger stores from Sunday business.

Five Cents Means Meal In Asia

DUNCAN — "Every second of the day two new babies are born into the world and someone has to feed them," Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova told about 100 pupils at Duncan Elementary School Monday.

Dr. Hitschmanova, on her annual fund-raising visit for the Unitarian Services Committee, said one cent would buy a child a six-ounce cup of milk and four cents would purchase a heaped plate of rice and vegetables.

Executive director of USC for 25 years, Dr. Hitschmanova visited Cliffside Preparatory School at Shawnigan Lake where she also met representatives of other private schools.

She said she particularly wanted to meet the Duncan elementary students because of their efforts while at the Gibbons Road annex to raise about $183.

Noises Bother Iowa Students

DOUBUQUE, Iowa (UPI) — Some of the students at all-male Loras College want the hours in which women can visit dormitories made stricter.

Loras students can receive visits from women at any time in their rooms, and several students are gathering petitions to allow each dormitory to set its own hours.

All dissenters said they were bothered by loud noises.

TOTAL SEAFRONT ZONE URGED

SEATTLE (AP) — The Washington Environmental Council wants the state to make zoning mandatory for all land fronting on Puget Sound, Hood Canal and the Pacific Ocean.

Such a broadening of the seacoast management act was one of seven legislative proposals the council's executive committee decided to support at a weekend meeting here.

Gov. Dan Evans has indicated his support for zoning of the seacoast and Hood Canal, but has withheld his endorsement of extending the zoning requirement to Puget Sound.

The other six proposals, which, along with the zoning plan, the council said it would concentrate on during the January session of the legislature:

- Creation of a department of environmental quality, to include administration of air and water pollution control and solid-waste disposal.
- Requiring restoration of ground cover in all strip-mined areas.
- Preserving open-space land through use of preferential tax treatment.
- Establishing liability and cleanup responsibility for accidental oil spills.
- Authorizing an inventory of shorelands and tidelands.
- Setting up a commission to protect the public interest in the location of thermal power plants.

Under the coastal zoning proposal, counties would be given a chance to adopt regulations following state guidelines. If the counties failed to comply, the state could go ahead and adopt zoning regulations.

Copter Crew Limps Home

PANMUNJOM (AP) — North Korea freed three American helicopter crew members today after the United States signed a letter of apology for their violation of North Korean air space.

One of the men, Specialist Herman E. Hofstatter of Lowpoint, Ill., was on crutches, and a U.S. official said he still had open wounds in his right knee.

A second man, Capt. David H. Crawford of Pooler, Ga., was wounded in the right shoulder when their helicopter was shot down, and a U.S. spokesman said he still has trouble moving the shoulder.

The third man, WO Malcolm V. Loepke of Richmond, Ind., has recovered fully from wounds in the left shoulder, the spokesman said.

A North Korean jeep brought the three men to the armistice headquarters here in the centre of the demilitarized zone and they were delivered to Maj.-Gen. Arthur H. Adams, the U.S. member of the Korean Military Armistice Commission.

A helicopter took the three men to an army hospital near Seoul for medical examination and interrogation.

The North Koreans had held them for 3½ months after their helicopter was shot down 15 miles north of the demilitarized zone last Aug. 17.

REPUDIATES ADMISSION

In the letter of apology the United States admitted that the flight of the helicopter across North Korea's frontier was a "criminal act" in violation of the Korean armistice. But a U.S. Army statement issued after the men were released repudiated the admission, much as the U.S. Navy did when it obtained the release of the 82 crew members of the U.S. spy ship Pueblo last December.

The army said the United States signed the latest apology "in the humanitarian interest of securing the release of the crewmen." Then in repudiation of the admission of criminality, the statement said:

1. The United States has consistently acknowledged that the small unarmed helicopter inadvertently crossed the truce zone without hostile intent when the pilot became disoriented.

2. It was obvious that a small unarmed helicopter would not be deliberately sent into hostile territory.

3. It was obvious that there was no criminal act or intentional infiltration.

Adams, who spoke briefly with the three men, said he got the impression that they had "a pretty rough time." He said Hofstatter told him "it was pretty bad."

Adams said the three men were kept separate from each other until 13 days ago.

KIERANS HEADS SATELLITE CONFERENCE

PARIS (Reuters) — Communications Minister Eric Kierans of Canada today was unanimously elected president of an international conference to promote the use of space satellite telecommunications for the rapid spread of education and greater cultural exchange.

The week-long conference, sponsored by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, will attempt to define the type of conventions and other international arrangements that will be needed for the free flow of information.

Big Four Talk; Little Progress Likely

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The Big Four ambassadors resumed their talks on the Middle East Tuesday, managing to imbue their discussions with a sense of urgency without giving any indication of hopes for progress.

After an almost four-hour meeting, described by an American spokesman as "very friendly and businesslike," the ambassdors issued a statement that said that the situation in the Middle East is "increasingly serious and urgent."

As if to underscore the urgency of the matter, the statement was five paragraphs long and contained some dramatic wordage. Correspondents had expected only a few words saying that the four had met, talked and would meet again.

Ambassadors Charles Yost of the United States, Armand Berard of France and Lord Caradon of Britain and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob Malik met formally on the question for the first time since July 1. They will meet again Saturday at Berard's residence.

In their statement they pledged to pursue their endeavors "with all possible speed" and said that they reaffirmed their conviction that the Middle East situation "must not be permitted to jeopardize international peace and security."

But, despite the length of the statement, there was no indication that the meeting at Yost's New York apartment got the four powers any farther along the road to peace than did the 16 similar meetings held between April and July, or the bilateral meetings held between U.S. and Soviet officials in Washington.

Nor were there any indications whether the meeting that started at 3 p.m. EDT and ended about 7 p.m.—with a brief interruption for tea—was simply a broad exchange of views or whether they got right down to substantive issues.

Ottawa Mobs Moonmen

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada welcomed and praised the American astronauts who manned the first moon-walk Apollo flight, then mobbed them in an autograph hunters' free-for-all during dessert and coffee at a government dinner.

So animated was the hunt for the signatures of astronauts Neil Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin and Michael Collins that their official host, Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, had to plead three times with the top drawer audience to resume their seats.

The cross-the-table autograph session featured good natured elbowing and shoving by members of Parliament, scientists and other guests, including Prime Minister Trudeau's parliamentary secretary James Walker, Conservative MP Michael Forrestal and New Democrat MP David Orlikow.

Mr. Drury wound up apparently arguing with individual autograph seekers across the dinner table.

After about 15 minutes the crowd that numbered at times nearly 100 men and an occasional woman returned to their tables. Mr. Drury delivered another welcoming speech in which he said the government dinner was "in the nature of a family party."

GET HANSARDS

He presented the Apollo 11 astronauts with specially-bound copies of the Hansard record of the speeches of tribute by political leaders in the House of Commons earlier in the day, plus a recording of the Commons proceedings, probably the first such recording ever made for use outside the chamber.

He also publicly conveyed regrets for the absence of Prime Minister Trudeau, who sent word Monday without reason that he would be unable to attend.

A spokesman in the prime minister's office said Mr. Trudeau had never made any definate commitment to attend, leaving it open for a last-minute decision.

Mr. Trudeau had delivered addresses of welcome at an open air ceremony on Parliament Hill earlier in the day and in the Commons.

He was reported working on papers for next week's constitutional conference at home. He was the astronauts' host for lunch.

All three astronauts were given standing ovations when introduced separately at the dinner. Each spoke briefly. They had held a news conference in the afternoon.

Mr. Armstrong said the visit to Canada, which concludes today with a trip to Montreal, was like "paying a call on a neighbor and dear friend after a long trip."

He paid tribute to Canadian space efforts.

The astronauts' world tour covered 27 countries in 37 days.

WOWS WITH FRENCH

Major Aldrin, who wowed the bilingual crowd earlier in the day with some fractured French, produced a smoother accent in French for the dinner.

"Nous sommes tres heureux d'etre ici ce soir," he said meaning that the astronauts and their wives were very happy to be here. He got mixed cheers and boos by congratulating the Ottawa Rough Riders on their Grey Cup football victory Sunday over Saskatchewan Roughriders.

He said the Apollo flights might accurately be called "destination man" rather than destination moon because of the way they helped man understand himself and his role in the universe.

The world tour was to show that "our space mission was not just for us but for all mankind."

Astronaut Collins, nominated by President Nixon last week as assistant secretary of state for public affairs, was asked at the news conference for comment on reports of mass murders by U.S. troops in Vietnam, a question that brought cries of protest from National Research Council of Canada scientists.

The astronaut said the murders were "tragic, if true" but he would not say more while they were under investigation.

Digging Marred Normal Tuesday

By DAVE RAZAY

NOTRE - DAME - DU - LAC, Que. (CP) — In the community centre, a juke box was blaring and teenagers were bowling, playing pool or just hanging around.

A handful of townspeople turned up for the evening mass in the big brick Roman Catholic church in this parish of 2,500 people 120 miles northeast of Quebec City.

It was a normal Tuesday night, except for all that feverish activity across the street where they were shovelling burned bodies out of the ashes of the old folks' home.

The men were working fast because authorities were concerned that the rubble might freeze and make removal of the victims more difficult.

Every once in a while, another body would be found and the spotlight-equipped searchers would cry "Un autre."

By midnight, the count was up to 32. Each victim was wrapped in a plastic sheet and carried off to a makeshift morgue, an old shed which the dead shared with a pile of scrap lumber.

Police estimated that the death toll in Tuesday morning's fire would be "around 40."

SHED NO TEARS

But if the villagers were griefstricken, they weren't expressing their sentiment in the street with tears. There was a stoniness about them. Nobody cried.

A lot of curious people came to have a look, including a horde of school children who crept up as close as possible to the scene until they were chased away.

But there was nothing much to see.

A mound of black ashes with the twisted metal of beds and fire escapes was all that remained of Le Repos du Vieillard, a three-storey wooden structure in the centre of the town on a splendid site overlooking Lac Temiscouata.

Among the spectators was a maxi-coated girl who lost an uncle in the blaze. Her first comment when she sniffed the bittersweet air was: "It smells."

She said the fire was a tragedy, adding: "But what do you want us to do?"

Many people appeared as resigned to the disaster as they are to poverty in this area of mixed farming and lumbering on the fringes of the Gaspe Peninsula.

Notre-Dame-du-Lac is a town along the Trans-Canadian Highway, bordered in this region by a fair share of weather-beaten buildings abandoned by farmers who have given up tilling the rocky soil.

PRIDE IN BLOOM

The town is celebrating its centennial year and the pride of the townspeople in their community is in full flower.

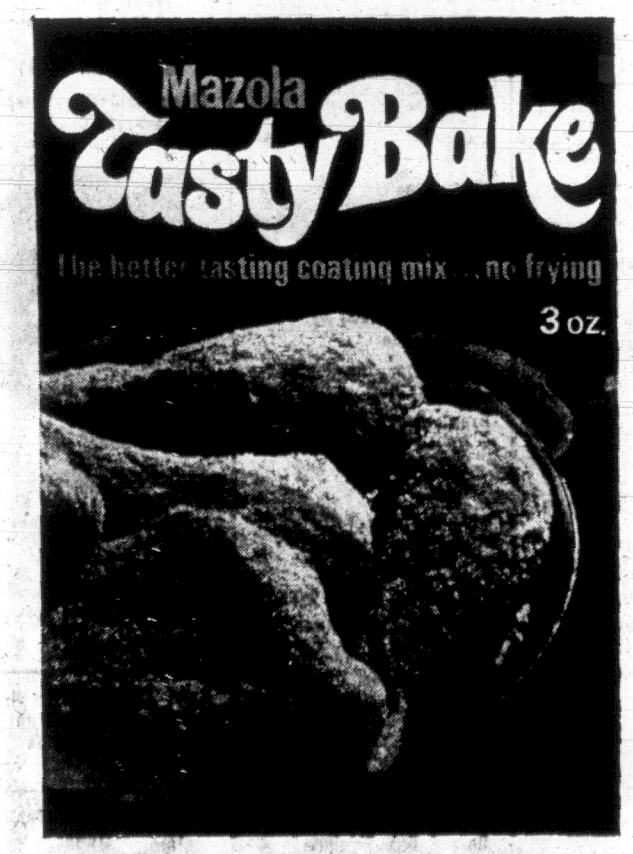

One of Notre-Dame-du-Lac's leading citizens is Charles-Eugene Tardif who made a living by operating the home for aged since 1954.

Townspeople describe Mr. Tardif as an honest man who always abided with government regulations and made any changes requested by the authorities.

Mr. Tardif was not available Tuesday. His son Robert, 18, worked with searchers, saying his father was ill and "heartbroke."

RODEOS UNBRITISH?

LONDON (CP) — The BBC Tuesday night gave television viewers across Britain a 50-minute close-up of the Calgary Stampede, complete with a rousing and sometimes biting commentary by correspondent Gerald Priestland.

Commenting on bands parading through Calgary, he suggested the scene reflected "something un-British in the North American blood."

BOBBY HANNA

City Singer Returns From Europe Success

A singer who, his father says, "never got too much of a break in Victoria," is coming back to this city for two weeks at the Old Forge.

Bobby Hanna, 28, went overseas with a Victoria group called the Wayward Trio three years ago. The others came back, but Hanna stayed there and made a name for himself as a night-club singer.

His father, William Foulds, 1604 Oakland, said he "hasn't reached the actual top, but he's doing very well for himself."

He'll be singing here for a couple of weeks, and then heads back to London for a Christmas eve review.

Since he left Victoria he has been manager and host at night clubs, has done some European tours, and in 1968 sang Written on the Wind, which won the Majorca Song Festival's international prize.

Family friend William Hodgeson helped Hanna get the Victoria booking.

BOXER'S STAGE DEBUT SUCCESS

Cassius on Broadway Stops Show

NEW YORK (AP) — Cassius Clay stopped Buck White in 58:47 of the first act Tuesday night at the George Abbott Theatre but it wasn't a knockout or even a TKO. The new Black Power musical came back for a second act in which the defrocked world heavyweight boxing champion dominated the action.

The final verdict on Clay, who prefers to be known by his Muslim name of Muhammad Ali, is in the hands of the drama critics. To a boxing writer, he was, well, a fine heavyweight, a bit on the flabby side.

Clay sang six songs and swung his 230—or more—pounds through a limited version of the old Ali Shuffle while actors by the name of Hunter, Honey Man, Weasel, Rubber Band and Jive gyrated to flickering lights. At one point Clay teetered on the edge of the stage but regained his balance quickly.

APPEALS CONVICTION

To a tone-deaf relic from the Morton Downey age who even thinks the Beatles sing off key, Clay's voice was clear and true most of the time. His big numbers were Black Balloons, We Come in Chains and Mighty Whitey, who was advised that it is "all over now."

Clay is appealing a conviction for failing to report for induction into the army. He was sentenced to five years in jail and fined $10,000 in 1967, but hopes it will be overthrown and he will be permitted to fight again. Many boxing commissions withdrew recognition of him as champion when he got into trouble with the army.

Wearing an afro-style wig and a sleeveless toga-type robe, Clay stopped the show when he walked down the aisle through the audience in the closing minute of the first act. He took his stand a pulpit, from which hung symbolic chains. Up to that point the undercard of prelim boys had been dull.

For fully 45 minutes Clay dominated the 45-minute second act, occasionally straying from the throne in the title role of Buck White to join the action. He spoke his message loud and clear.

After the show he spotted Floyd Patterson, former champion and one of his ring victims, in an orchestra seat. "There's Floyd Patterson!" Clay shouted to the audience. "Give him a hand."

CRITICS NOT WILD

William Glover, Associated Press drama critic, called the musical "undistinguished" and said Clay "displayed a rather subdued thespic style and hint of paunch as the preaching firebrand of a ragamuffin ghetto organization called B.A.D. for Beautiful Allelujah Days."

MEDIUM COOL IS HOT PROPERTY

Political History and Great Cinema at Once

By PETER McNELLY

When the camera focuses the first image is cracked glass.

And as Haskell Wexler's Medium Cool unfolds, a lot more than just glass gets bashed into the debris that was Chicago during the 1968 Democratic convention.

Medium Cool chronicles the summer of a television newsreel photographer and his love affair with a beautiful West Virginia woman widowed by the Vietnam war.

Movie newcomers Robert Foster and Verna Bloom play the lead roles with assurance, but the show's real star is the newsreel camera itself.

For Medium Cool is actually a study of the social pressures which are shaping TV journalism in the United States.

Early in the film, backstage newsmen discuss their personal attitudes toward their work. By jumping from the faces of each speaker, Wexler's camera does not permit the audience to form a clear impression of what most defines the role of the contemporary journalist.

This frees Medium Cool from having to commit itself to any specific point of view, allowing the film itself to become a reporter of news gathering.

●

Haskell Wexler brings 30 years of award-winning experience in photography to a new role as writer, producer and director.

His movie is probably the most purely visual commercial film ever made in the United States. Its flashy imagery is edited to a pace as brash and stimulating as the mayhem it documents.

Wexler takes the film all over Chicago: to a punchy roller derby, the ghetto's clenched fist, indoor shooting ranges, National Guard riot practice, and finally to the Democratic convention itself.

Occasionally, Medium Cool sacrifices imagery for symbolism and becomes heavy-handed. But the weakness is minor, much like naive idealism in the service of just cause. Overstatement is an American trait and this is a thoroughly American movie.

In one of the saddest and most moving scenes in the film, Wexler shows the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles moments before Robert Kennedy walked into its death. By not showing the actual shooting, Wexler forces the audience's imagination to reconstruct Kennedy's assassination.

When Medium Cool operates on this level it combines important political history with great cinema.

●

But the power is not sustained as Wexler fails to develop his main character. The conclusion of the film lacks the conviction of its imagery. We never completely discover how the police riot at the end of the movie relates to the photographer's relationship with the widow. By implication, the film fails to relate itself to any of the themes it suggests.

Medium Cool leaves Victoria on Thursday. It deserves a far longer showing.

Ritual Murderers of Actress Plotted More Killing—Police

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — A pseudo-religious hippie gang linked with the murder of actress Sharon Tate and at least seven other persons planned 11 more killings, but never got around to them, police sources said today.

The names of the 11 intended victims were found in a list in the cult's secluded desert commune in Death Valley, but they were not murdered because a police raid in October ended the gang's activities, the sources said.

Three members of the gang have been arrested on murder warrants—Charles Watson, 24,

ATKINS
. . . witness

held in his home town of McKinney, Tex.; Linda Kasabian, 19, who gave herself up in Concord, N.H., and Patricia Krenwinkel, 21, arrested in Mobile, Ala.

Authorities moved to have them extradited to California.

The Los Angeles district attorney's office will go before the county grand jury Friday to get indictments against four or five other members of the gang for the murders of Miss Tate, 26, and four friends at her Bel Air home Aug. 9.

'GOD' GETS HEARING

A preliminary hearing was scheduled today in Independence, near Death Valley, for Charles Miles Manson, 34, described as head of the occult group and known as "God" and "Satan." He is charged with possession of stolen property.

Testimony probably would be confined to a raid on the hippie commune, said District Attorney Frank Fowles. Deputies arrested 23, then released all but 10. The latter were held on a variety of charges including auto theft. They included Manson.

Police said several members of a nomadic group of hippies, last camped near Death Valley and including Watson and Misses Krenwinkel and Kasabien, committed all seven killings. They declined comment on statements by a lawyer linking this group of hippies with Manson's cult.

Meanwhile, a Santa Monica court today was expected to free a 31-year-old woman, Shelley Nadell, who said she learned the grisly details of the chain of murders and told police after talking to her hippie cellmate, Susan Atkins, 21, a member of the gang.

Miss Atkins's lawyer, Richard Caballero, told reporters police believe his client was at three murder scenes—the Tate killings, the murder of millionaire supermarket owner Leno LaBianca and his wife Rose Aug. 10 and the July 25 torture murder of a 34-year-old Los Angeles musician, Gary Hinman.

'DID NOT PARTICIPATE'

Police want her as a principal witness in the murder trial, Caballero said, although he did not say whether she had been offered immunity against self-incrimination. He claimed his client did not participate physically in any of the murders.

Miss Atkins was charged Tuesday in Santa Monica municipal court with being an accomplice in the Hinman murder and pleaded not guilty.

Shelley Nadell appeared in the same court a few hours later on a charge of forging drug prescriptions. Judge Edward Brand told reporters she would be free when she appears a second time today.

The district attorney's office said Miss Nadell would be given police protection and might even be held in protective custody as a material witness in the trial.

Caballero said Miss Atkins was among several persons whom he said Manson "hypnotized" and "intrigued" into believing they "belonged to him." He said most were women.

Los Angeles police have filed no charges against Manson.

Press reports of the story Miss Atkins told Miss Nadell, and which Miss Nadell passed on to the police, said three young women and two men went to Miss Tate's rented house dressed in black and carrying sheathed knives.

One of the men had a gun and another gang member cut the telephone wires.

Steven Parent, 18, a friend of the house caretaker, was the first killed as he was driving toward the front gate of the hilltop home.

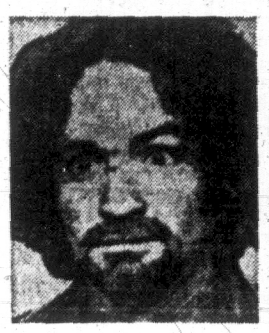

The killers then entered the house where they stabbed Miss Tate, who was 8½ months pregnant, after refusing to listen to her pleas to save her baby.

Miss Tate's two house guests, Voityck Frokowski, 37, and coffee heiress Abigail Folger, 26, tried to escape but were stopped on the lawn, stabbed and shot. Frokowski offered the gang money if they would spare his life.

A woman member of the gang took a towel, dipped it in the blood of one of the victims and scrawled "pig" on the front door. The towel was then draped over the head of the fifth victim, Miss Tate's former fiance, Hollywood hairdresser Jay Sebring, 35, to make it look like a hood.

Miss Nadell is reported to have learned that next night the same five were ordered back to Los Angeles to kill LaBianca and his wife because gang leaders thought that after the Tate killings they might "lose their nerve."

One of the girls killed Mrs. LaBianca while the rest of the gang killed her husband and mutilated his body with a fork. They then sat down to a meal from the LaBianca refrigerator and had a shower before returning to the California-Nevada border.

50 Pilots To Visit Comox Base

Fifty Victoria pilots will visit Search and Rescue facilities at Canadian Armed Forces Base Comox Sunday to learn something about the problems of finding downed flyers in British Columbia.

And they will pick up pointers which may help them avoid being the object of a search.

The visit has been arranged by The Canadian Owners and Pilots Association.

British Columbia has more downed airplanes than other parts of Canada, because of the terrain, and survival is of vital importance to every flyer in this area, a spokesman for the group pointed out.

The Victoria flyers will leave the B.C. Hydro parking lot at 8 a.m. for Comox, returning to the city at 8 p.m.

Bolshevik Hero, Ex-USSR President Voroshilov Dies Humiliated Outcast

MOSCOW (AP) — Klimenti Voroshilov, one of the last surviving heroes of the Bolshevik Revolution and a former president of the Soviet Union, died today, Tass announced. He was 88.

The brief announcement by the official Soviet news agency gave no details. Voroshilov had spent his last years a lonely, humiliated outcast and had not been reported at an official function since the 1963 Revolutionary Day parade.

Of all the men in the Soviet Communist hierarchy in the days when Joseph Stalin ruled he was perhaps the only one who could call Stalin friend. Despite all Voroshilov's blunders, Stalin coverd him with a mantle of glory and protected him from the penalties of his mistakes.

But after Stalin died, Voroshilov, then past 70, fell upon evil days. He threw in with a group of old Stalinists trying to oust Nikita Khrushchev from party leadership. Khrushchev slapped down the "anti-party group," led by V. M. Molotov, Georgi M. Malenkov and Lazar M. Kaganovich, in 1957.

When Khrushchev brought details of the plot into the open at the party congress in 1961, Voroshilov was pictured as a dupe.

He wrote a letter humbly admitting his part in the plot but claiming he had no idea what was involved.

Khrushchev interceded for him, calling him "a broken man" and urging the congress to treat him less severely than the others.

At the November celebrations of the anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution that year, however, Voroshilov's humiliation was publicly demonstrated. Before thousands, he sought to mount the tribune of honor atop Lenin's tomb, from which he and other Soviet leaders had always taken the salutes of the marchers. A guard stopped him and he was led away.

Later his name was stripped from all public places and the town of Voroshilovgrad changed its name back to Lugansk.

He continued to be invited to Kremlin receptions but was allotted a place among minor officials and was coldly ignored when he shouldered his way into the higher-ranking officials with the guests of honor.

Yet, he was permitted to keep his Moscow apartment and his automobile, won back his seat in the Supreme Soviet (parliament) in 1962, and was awarded the Order of Lenin for his 80th birthday.

Voroshilov was born Feb. 4, 1881, in the Ukrainian village of Verkhnte. His father was a Czarist soldier who retired to life of a railway watchman. At six Voroshilov went to work in a coal mine and performed other menial labor until he was 12, when he got a chance to go to school. He attended for two years, then went back to work, in a factory in the Donets Basin, where his revolutionary activities began.

At 18, he went to jail for organizing strikes in the factory. From that time until the revolution he was in and out of jail, in and out of exile in Siberia. His friendship with Stalin was formed about 1906, during one of his rare periods of freedom.

COMMANDED ARMIES

In the civil war, he commanded armies and was head of the police network in the Ukraine. In 1921, he was elected a member of the Communist party central committee and in 1925 became commander of the Moscow military district. In 1934, he was given command of the whole Red Army and Stalin made him a marshal. He helped Stalin in the vast army blood purge of the 1930s in which thousands of military men were executed or exiled.

In 1940, Voroshilov fumbled the ball in the invasion of Finland and was relieved. Nevertheless, Stalin made him commander-in-chief of the northwestern armies; he was unable to lift the Nazi siege of Leningrad and was relieved again. Again Stalin protected him, making him a member of the five-man state committee for defence. In 1946 he was made a deputy premier.

After Stalin's death, he was kicked upstairs to the job of chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, in effect president of the Soviet Union, a post with scant power.

In his prime, Voroshilov had a booming voice which dominated many a party meeting. He was noted for his staying power in drinking bouts.

His wife, Ekaterina Davidovna Voroshilov, also a veteran Bolshevik, died in 1959.

Study Being Made Of Grain Elevators

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is looking at all West Coast grain-handling facilities to see what is needed for the future, Otto Lang, minister without portfolio, told the Commons Tuesday.

Lang, responsible for the Canadian wheat board, made the comment in response to questions about an unused government-owned terminal elevator at Vancouver.

The minister said the National Harbor Board's No. 2 elevator at Vancouver is unsuitable for general grain handling without costly renovations. It had and could be used for cleaning of wheat only.

Harold Winch (NDP-Vancouver East) wondered whether Lang was confusing No. 2 with the National Harbor Board's No. 3 elevator which has been condemned. Lang thought not.

John Diefenbaker (PC-Prince Albert) asked whether the government is considering a royal commission study of the grain marketing system and the appointment of a transport controller.

Lang replied that appropriate steps have been taken to see that the transportation system can handle Canadian grain. He had not changed his mind about a transport controller. He was opposed.

'TWIN BED' SITUATION IN NEW BRUNSWICK

'Soft' Barrier Only Exists in Acadia

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN

MONCTON (CP) — "It's a twin-bed situation," said an Acadian leader of the relationship between the French- and English-speaking people of New Brunswick.

Euclide Daigle, administrative secretary of the Societe Nationale des Acadiens, made it clear nonetheless that twin beds and separate dwellings are far different things.

A former journalist, he replied sharply when a reporter asked him to speak specifically of the Acadian mood at present and then the mood of New Brunswickers generally.

"There are not two New Brunswicks," he declared. "There's just one entity."

The linguistic groups were reasonably well equipped to promote the province in their respective approaches and they looked at things Canadian in much the same manner despite a certain lack of dialogue between them.

DAIGLE
. . . 'only one entity.'

RATIO REFLECTED

What is the feeling in this paradoxical province —traditional bastion of United Empire Loyalists yet the first, outside Quebec, to elect a French-language premier?

There are arguments, of course, but perhaps the award-winning author and editor, Stuart Trueman of Saint John, summed it up when he wrote:

"The plain fact is that New Brunswick—the province which, more than any other, reflects the ratio of English and French in Canada—has been a model of mutual goodwill for the rest of Canada."

Mr. Trueman conceded it is conceivable that a French-English crisis could erupt in New Brunswick. Acadians had been patient about winning their rights—"and with good reason."

"They've been winning them slowly, but steadily and surely, on a basis of understanding and goodwill, without the necessity of riotous fanatical demonstrations which would have only antagonized the English-speaking people and caused them to dig in their heels."

Mr. Daigle said Acadians, who comprise roughly 40 per cent of the population, were traditionally poorer than their English-speaking compatriots, but comparisons with Quebec were inexact.

He feels Louis Robichaud, New Brunswick's first Acadian premier, is correct in maintaining that the province can set an example in Canada, but "it will take a few years yet."

BARRIER IS SOFT

On a person-to-person basis, relations are apparently better across the linguistic line here than in Montreal, yet no "general enthusiasm" exists for either side to get to know the other better. This was a long-standing situation.

"If you want to call it a barrier, it's a soft one, but it's been here quite a while," said Mr. Daigle. "Still, it's good there is no harshness."

Alexandre Boudreau, director of the Memramcook Institut for adult education, spoke of a "very great" improvement, particularly in the last 10 years or so.

"Acadians have during the last few decades produced leaders who are able to explain the Acadians to their compatriots better than ever before," he said.

The Acadians, long residing in almost complete isolation, did not communicate well, and the English side did little to help or encourage communication.

"But there have been tremendous improvements in communication and thus in understanding. As an example, 20 or even 15 years ago if a New Brunswick government had even mentioned the possibility of a completely French-language university, there probably would have been an uproar."

CONSENT UNANIMOUS

Now the University of Moncton had been established by the provincial legislature with "the unanimous consent of the English population and with their encouragement."

Mr. Boudreau maintains that Acadians have evolved a "practical philosophy," devoid of sentiment, toward both of Canada's mother countries.

"We were expelled by the English in 1755 and abandoned by the French, so that's settled," he said. "There is an affinity culturally for France but it stops there—no sentiment involved."

History, however, had produced a different attitude in English-speaking New Brunswickers, many of them descendants of the United Empire Loyalists.

"Those people came because they did not want to live under any flag but the Union Jack," said Mr. Boudreau. "They were comparatively well treated by their mother country. They were given help and land.

"So sentimentally and traditionally they remained much more strongly attached to England than the French Acadians to France."

What about attitudes to Quebec?

FEAR SEPARATISM

"I think all Maritimers are terribly afraid of Quebec separatism precisely because of the feeling that if Quebec separated it would automatically separate us from the rest of Canada.

"This is as true of French Acadians as of the others. They want to feel at home in all Canada. Culturally they have much affinity with Quebec. But the Acadians have their own history. They have been separated from Quebec for 200 years, practically isolated, and they are not strongly attached sentimentally to the province of Quebec. . . ."

Mr. Boudreau said that in New Brunswick there are still a "few spots and groups" retaining old antipathies toward Acadians.

But he and Mr. Daigle stressed in separate conversations that they attach no importance to the group called the Canadian Loyalist Association, formerly known as the Maritime Loyalist Association.

WANT ONE LANGUAGE

Backing up their contention that the association was unpopular among citizens of whatever language, Moncton businessman J. A. (Jack) Keefe commented:

"I'm sure it won't get off the ground."

W. E. Gamblen who termed himself a director of the association, said in a telephone interview there is a mistaken impression that "we stand for Anglo-Saxons only."

"We stand for all ethnic groups, and there are 21 or so across Canada. Otherwise we will have second-class citizens everywhere. There should be one official working language, English, in Canada. We don't care how many cultures. We swear allegiance to the Queen."

One Acadian leader commented wryly that some English-speaking citizens have the impression they are being inundated by Acadians when, in fact, "all that is happening is that they are moving around more."

The Acadian birth rate had dropped considerably. But in Saint John, for instance, where hardly a word of French was heard 20 years ago, there were now roughly 13,000 French Acadians in a population of 100,000.

Mr. Daigle, in analysing Acadian attitudes, said cultural aid had been sought in Quebec City, Ottawa and Paris. France provided substantial help, including $500,000 for L'Evangeline, the only French-language daily in the Maritimes.

This corresponds to the amount that Acadians put into the newspaper in the last 30 years," said Mr. Daigle in stressing home efforts to keep the French culture alive.

Nationalize Assets Of Church: Report

LONDON (Reuters) — The Church of England, the main Protestant church in the British Isles, should be nationalized and its billion-dollar assets turned over to the government, says a report published this week by the National Secular Society.

The society, founded in 1866 to fight the Church of England's power, calls for voluntary offerings to support full-time clergymen in some areas. In other areas the church could become spiritually renewed by doing away with country parsons and substituting them with worker-priests, it says.

The report, one of 60 commissioned by a government-appointed committee investigating the role of adult education, says churches should be turned into community social and cultural centres.

"All church premises and lands except recent gifts and bequests should be nationalized for the public benefit," says the society.

It argued that the Church of England is unrepresentative of public opinion yet enjoys jurisdiction over parish churches, cathedrals and university chapels whose cultural treasures would be put to better educational use.

It also uges the abolition of the church commissioners, a body of 95 clerics and laymen who oversee the investment of church assets.

But the society would not abolish all places of worship. It says that for a small fee the church might be able to rent nationalized buildings for services.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight is Bridge on the River Kwai, Channel 8 at 7 p.m. A classic Second World War drama, it's about a battalion of British prisoners of the Japanese working on the "death railroad" through Ceylon. The film, starring Alec Guinness and Sessue Hayakawa, won seven academy awards for 1957.

TWELFTH NIGHT (SPECIAL), 8:30, Channels 2 and 6. This British production of Shakespeare's popular comedy has a star-studded cast, including Alec Guinness in a rare TV appearance.

GLEN CAMPBELL HOUR, 7:30, Channel 7. Tony Bennett, not crowded for time, offers "Little Green Apples," "MacArthur Park," and joins Glen for a Hank Williams medley of songs like "Your Cheatin' Heart." On the comedy side, the team of Gaylord and Holiday portray a father urging his son to become a violinist instead of a fighter, and a gas station attendant pushing his latest contest. Guest Lynn Kellogg sings "The Last Thing on My Mind" and Campbell, in his concert spot, does "If You Go Away" among others.

ROOM 222, 8:30, Channel 4. "Clothes Make the Boy." An appropriate tale for a high school series comes to grips with the problems posed by current styles of student dress. Walt Whitman High's outmoded code on the sybject is challenged by the student body, and teacher Dixon sides with them most of the way. When the PTA gets in on the scene, the verbal exchanges during a meeting will strike a familiar note in families with children of high school age.

★ ★ ★

FROM HOLLYWOOD WITH LOVE (SPECIAL), 7:30, Channels 2 and 6. Ann-Margret's second special, it features guest appearances by Dean Martin and Lucille Ball and plenty of location photography. It looks like one of Hollywood's better variety offerings for this season.

★ ★ ★

MEDICAL CENTRE, 9:00, Channel 12. Big name guest stars Walter Pidgeon and Viveca Lindfors add a touch of glamor to the hospital atmosphere. Pidgeon plays an ambassador with a bad ticker that requires surgery, but his son opposes any such move. Doc Gannon first tries the reasoning approach with the son, and then brings in outside help in the person of Viveca Lindfors, a great and good friend of the ambassador. Miss Lindfors turns on the power, and Linden Chiles seems strong enough in the role of the young troublemaker.

SPECIAL. "JACK BENNY'S NEW LOOK," 9:00, Channel 5. The title is really misleading — Jack may talk about nudity and appear in hippie clothes, but his style is unchanged. He plays the fool, visiting Gregory Peck to invite him on the show, and Peck is the busy star answering phone calls while Benny checks the furniture and plays jacks, picking up most of the laughs. Later, Peck joins Benny and George Burns in a nice, hokey, song and dance number.

THEN CAME BRONSON, 10:00, Channel 5. "All the World and God." A touching hour. Jim befriends a nurse (Lois Nettleton) in a mountain outpost of a medical centre where the doctor has just died. The girl wants to abandon the small community that she knows will undoubtedly have trouble finding another doctor or nurse. Together, they make her rounds, and in a series of moving vignettes, we meet a blind lady, an impoverished black family, an aging moonshiner and a pathetic young hermit, all dependent for their well-being on the nurse's visits. Slow moving, as usual, but effective.

FIDDLING FOR LAUGHS is a specialty of Jack Benny (above) whose new look is unveiled in an hour-long musical variety special tonight at 9 on Channel 5. (See listing opposite.)

HAWAII FIVE-O, 10:00, Channels 7, 12. Interesting action hour. The head of the Asian nation, a bad guy, makes an unexpected landing in Hawaii, and agents must protect him from assassination attempts. McGarrett calls on agent Kono to act as the human target in the role of the unwelcome dictator, and Kono has a close call. Show momentum seldom slacks off, and a secondary plot helps to sustain viewer interest.

WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT A GOOD DEAL ON A BOAT OR A GOOD BOAT DEALER

There are places where you can get such a "terrific deal" on a boat that you've got no comeback. Especially when you need to come back. Face it, no boat is flawless. So you need a come-back with a good dealer. One who sees that you get the right boat running right when you get it. One who'll help you keep it running right for years. Without copping out.

Are we good dealers?

Would Bertram let us handle Bertrams if we weren't?

Court Hears Claim Of U.S. Involvement

PRETORIA (Reuters) — The security trial of 22 black South Africans was adjourned Tuesday until Dec. 8 after a prosecution witness testified that 2,000 secret pamphlets were secretly printed on U.S. Information Service duplicating machines by one of the accused.

Mohale Manhaniele, employed in the USIS office in Johannesburg, said the printing was done by Winnie Mandela, one of the 22 persons on trial on charges under the Suppression of Communism Act, and two other women. She is the wife of Nelson Mandela, a former leader of the banned African National Congress now serving a life sentence for plotting revolution and planning a military invasion of South Africa.

She visited Manhaniele at the USIS office and told him she wished to print some secret pamphlets, the witness told the South African Supreme Court.

Although he did not have his employers' permission, he agreed to let her use the office duplicating machines. The printing was done on a Sunday when the office was closed and the machines could be used in comparative safety, Manhaniele said.

Mrs. Mandela and two other women printed about 2,000 copies from a stencil.

An earlier prosecution witness, Lukas Opperman, said that Philip Golding, 24-year-old British economist and a central figure in the trial, had told him he was "up to his neck" in South African politics.

Disease May Fight Insects

BURNABY (CP) — While United States officials are carefully avoiding the possibility of "moon bugs" infecting humans, Dr. Jaroslav Weiser wants to spread a little disease among British Columbia's insects.

Dr. Weiser, a Czechoslovakian expert on insect diseases who joined the Simon Fraser University pestology centre this year, will combat the local bugs with parasites and bacteria.

And furthermore he wants to send some of the sick Canadian insects back to Czechoslovakia and Russia where he hopes they'll infect and reduce similar pests there.

Dr. Weiser, director of the Institute of Insect Pestology, Prague, is working with the SFU pestologists for one year in developing forms of insect control which don't require chemicals.

Perfect Guide for Plants of B.C.

By HILDA BEASTALL

A gift book for a gardener should be chosen with his particular gardening interest in mind. The owner of a large forested piece of property will find it awkward to be enthusiastic about a learned treatise on how to garden a city lot.

Hilda

But there is a book called Trees, Shrubs and Flowers to Know in British Columbia. Any person with curiosity and a piece of ground covered with wild growth will want this little book.

It was written locally by C. P. Lyons and first published in 1952. Since then the book has been revised with the latest printing in 1965.

The book is a field book well illustrated by the author, and small enough to be valuable outdoors. The sections on trees, shrubs and flowers are separated, and these are again divided into groups according to their more obvious characteristics.

Thus it is comforting to the property owner not to be expected to be a botanist before he begins though he may well develop the interest before long with the aid of this book.

All the native wild flowers are dealt with under their dominant color, white or yellow or purple. Listing their preferred habitat and range of territory where commonly found aids in identification.

Eight ferns found in British Columbia are illustrated and described, and a page is devoted to information on edible native plants including the season in which each is likely to be found.

Of great interest to newcomers here and to those who walk in the woods are four pages listed as Nature's Calendar.

These pages give in chart form a listing of trees, shrubs and flowers by the months during which they bloom and fruit.

The flower section of this calendar is further divided into Coastal and Interior.

An extensive index lists the plants by common names and botanical, so that one progresses easily from one to the other.

Take a look at this book at any book store or counter, or at the public library. You may then buy it with confidence, knowing without a doubt that more than one of your friends will be grateful for it as a gift.

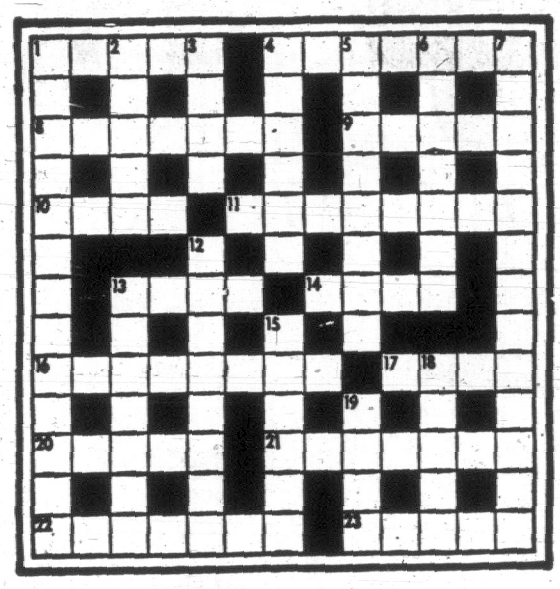

It is the sort of book which never grows old or out-of-date, and indeed it will become more treasured as the years pass and the native plants of British Columbia assume their rightful important place in the environment of the ordinary citizen.

Cosmetic Surgery Can Bring Much Joy

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

I wonder how many people realize how much a cosmetic surgeon can do for a person who is terribly unhappy, discouraged, and almost suicidal over an ugly nose, the lack of a chin or flaring ears. As Theodore Berland wrote in "Today's Health," the fine magazine published for lay people by the American Medical Association (AMA), a middle-aged woman had applied for a job and had passed the competitive tests with high grades. But because her looks were against her, she did not get the job. Then she had her face changed with plastic surgery, and with that, she went back and got the job.

Berland also tells of a felon about to be released from a penitentiary, who hoped to work as a salesman, but had trouble because of a certain ugly deformity of his face. He had this fixed surgically, and then he got the job he wanted.

A young salesman, hoping to be promoted in his company, hit a snag when the boss saw an ugly tattoo on his arm. A cosmetic surgeon removed it, and now the young man is headed for promotion.

I have received so many letters from unhappy teenagers, both girls and boys, who felt that their whole future, both in love and in business, was going to be messed up because of some ugly feature. Many a girl is distressed because her breasts are much too small, or much too big, and she is so self-conscious about this that she will never go out with a beau or go to a dance. When a surgeon can fix her up so that she feels that she looks all right, she then will feel that her life is worth living.

Sometimes a woman who has had several children has such sagging breasts that she is very unhappy. A surgeon can lift them up, and put them in place, and then she is happy again. Many a young woman or teen-ager is desperately unhappy because she has no chin. Today a good plastic surgeon can make a chin for her.

★ ★ ★

Just think what many of the children and adults in primitive countries have to put up with, living a life with a hare-lip (a deformity of the face in which the lip does not develop completely while the infant is in the mother's womb). It must be an agony every day.

A fine plastic surgeon, because he loved to help children, used to spend his Sundays in his operating room, fixing up deformed children whose parents had no money. He was richly rewarded, he said, by the happiness he gave to the children.

The late Dr. Archibald McIndoo, a great plastic surgeon, when he left the Mayo Clinic and went to London, spent the rest of his life fixing up the faces of men who had been horribly wounded or horribly burned in the Second World War. He became one of the most loved men in England, and soon was knighted.

★ ★ ★

Today, with so many automobile accidents, many a person with a smashed nose or a bad cut on his face is not happy until a plastic surgeon fixes him up. Some people get a big baggy lower lid, where fat breaks through from under the eye, and projects forward, like a tiny rupture. A fine cosmetic surgeon has become very skilful in removing these little fatty excrescences, and this can help tremendously the person, perhaps a minister or business executive, who with his puffy eyes had given the appearance of being debauched and alcoholic, although he may never have taken a drink.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Army Crossed Maine To Defend Canada

By BOB BOWMAN

When the Treaty of Ghent was signed, ending the War of 1812, British and U.S. delegates drank to the toast "May the gates of Janus, here closed, not be opened again for a century". The wish has come true in the sense that Britain and the U.S. have not fought each other since then, but there have been many close calls. Even as recently as 1903 President Theodore Roosevelt threatened to send troops into Canada to get the Alaska boundary established along a line drawn by the U.S.

Another occasion when Canada might have become the battleground of a war between Britain and the U.S. was in 1861. During the American Civil War a northern warship stopped a British liner on the Atlantic and took off some Confederate officials who were going to London and Paris.

Both sides were furious owing to this and other incidents. Britain rushed 14,000 troops across the Atlantic to defend Canada in the event of war, but they did not begin to arrive until December 3, 1861, when the St. Lawrence was frozen. Halifax and Saint John were the chief disembarkation ports, and the troops had to get to Quebec in winter conditions. They drove in sleighs and even marched on snowshoes, which must have been a comical sight as most of the British soldiers had never even seen snow before.

Another comical aspect of the afafir was that the troops who were going to defend Canada against an American attack, crossed the State of Maine to get to Quebec and there was no objection from the U.S.

Actually the Americans were fully involved in their own civil war and Presdient Lincoln did not want to take on Britain as well. Cooler heads prevailed and war was avoided although the situation was dangerous for several years. In fact it helped to bring about Confederation.

Other events in December 3:

1653 — Nicolas Denys was granted all land in Acadia between Capes Canso and Rosiers.

1738 — Pierre de la Verendrye entered Mandan village in present day North Dakota.

1827 — Montreal Presbyterians asked for share of clergy reserves.

1839 — Erie and Ontario Railroad, a horse-drawn tramway, opened between Niagara and Chippewa.

1855 — Great Western Railway opened between Hamilton and Toronto.

1892 — Department of Trade and Commerce was established.

1919 — Federal government provided $25 million to enable tenants to purchase homes.

1951 — Federal and Ontario governments agreed on St. Lawrence power development.

1960 — Largest civilian airport in Canada was opened at Edmonton, Alberta.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

The deal presented today features an unusual type of play, in which declarer had nothing going for him except a prayer. As it urned out, on this particular day the gods of chance were on his side, and his prayer came to fruition.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

The opening lead was taken by South's ace of hearts, after which the ace and king of trumps were cashed. When West discarded a heart on the kind of trumps, the loss of a trump trick to East's queen became inevitable.

As declarer studied his assets, the loss of a heart trick also seemed inevitable, since there was nothing in dummy that could be established for a discard of South's losing heart. Nevertheless, when play had ended, South had fulfilled his contract—and there was nothing the opponents could have done about it.

At trick four, declarer led his king of clubs. This was followed by a club to the board's ace. A third club lead was then ruffed in the South hand.

Next came the cashing of the ace, king, and queen of diamonds. Now the king of hearts was played leaving dummy with the singleton seven of hearts, while declarer retained the singleton nine of hearts.

A trump was then led, which East had no choice but to win with his high queen. Since East had no heart to play back, he was compelled to lead a club or a diamond. On this trick South discarded his losing heart while, simultaneously, he ruffed the lead in dummy. The rest of the tricks belonged to South.

The question in the reader's mind might be: "If East had a third heart, wouldn't declarer have gone down?" The answer is: "Yes." But the point of the hand is that South had no alternative but to hope that East had started with just a doubleton heart. As is evident, his hope turned out to be a reality, resulting in East becoming the victim of an end play.

"Look, Dad," said Bill. "That's a funny number."

His father looked, and shook his head, "I don't get it. What's funny?"

Bill grinned. "It's the smallest number that, if you multiply it by seven and then take away three you get all nines."

He was right, so what was that number?

'All Outgo and No Income'

OTTAWA (CP) — The owner of an Alberta construction firm has lost a tax case before the tax appeal board in which he claimed $4,410 expenses for maintaining a $5,000 race horse that won no money.

"It was a clear case of all outgo and no income," said board member J. O. Weldon in a written judgment.

Norman Nilsen, a carpenter who came to Canada from Norway and England in 1952 and established a sizable construction business, bought the race horse named Comte de Paris in 1965, and paid $4,410 that year for its maintenance, training and miscellaneous expenses.

He claimed the expense for tax purposes against his total income for the year, on the basis that he was in the business of farming, which, under the Income Tax Act, includes "maintaining of horses for racing."

He later traded the horse back to the seller for another horse because Comte de Paris "could race straight but it could not go round the bend," he told the board.

He also bought another horse, Sweet Johanne, for $3,000, but he told the board that the mare might belong to his wife since it was named after her. Subsequent to 1965, his stable won $60 "or something like that" one year, and "little or nothing" for two years until his horses won $300 to $500 in prize money in the fourth year.

NEWSPAPER, STAFF ELIMINATED

Provincial NDP Cuts Costs

The provincial New Democratic Party has dropped its monthly newspaper, cut four staff members and put a $50,000 limit on 1970 expenditures in a tough austerity drive.

The move is caused by mounting debt which is expected to reach $65,000 by the end of this year.

The party newspaper, The Democrat, announces the cutback in its December issue which is the last one to appear, at least until 1971.

Organizers Colin Gabelmann and Michael Lewis along with a bookkeeper and part time membership secretary will be laid off, leaving only a provincial secretary and two stenographers to run the provincial office.

The "real problem" in the party's finances is described as the unpaid debts owed to the party by constituency associations both as a result of the August provincial election and the previous federal election in 1968.

The newspaper, in a front page editorial, says the cutbacks will mean a losss of membership growth in the 1970 as well as a loss of services to members.

The provincial office has been receiving an average of $4.30 for each of its 16,000 members while spending an average of $6.90 per member annually.

The party is hampered in raising more funds through the constituency assocations because the associations owe an estimated $94,000 to suppliers and banks as a result of the provincial election.

Constituency quotas are assessed by the central office for goods and services provided. This debt owed to the party amounts to $40,000 and "sad experience compels the assumption that not more than one third of it will ever be paid," The Democrat says.

The newspaper says that in the past the party has "operated on a budget better suited to a medium sized local union . . .

"It is no longer possible to run an adequate provincial party on a budget of less than $125,000-$175,000. And that cost will increase in future."

The party executive does not have the power to increase dues—currently at $5 year—to help overcome the debt.

The newspaper suggests that amount is less than adequate to the task of confronting "an entire system, entrenched wealth, the establishment, the media, the essential conservatism that lurks in all of us."

The financial situation is expected to be discussed at a party convention next June.

Nuclear Attack Blueprint Fixes Communist Targets

FUMES KILL FOUR SAILORS

HALIFAX (CP) — Four crew members of the Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure died early today after they were overcome by aviation gasoline fumes aboard ship during fleet exercises off the coast.

The victims were identified as LS Gary Swim, Halifax; LS Gordon Hayes Morrell, Halifax; LS Donald Raymond Patterson, Halifax, and OS John Eleven Boulter, Summerside, P.E.I.

•

Vice-Admiral J. C. O'Brien, commander Maritime Command, said the men were venting fuel tanks aboard the carrier when they were asphyxiated.

The Bonaventure was about 100 miles southwest of Cape Sable Island at Nova Scotia's southern tip.

The admiral said aviation gasoline from the carrier's tanks was returned to storage at an oil refinery in Dartmouth, N.S., last Monday morning prior to her departure for fleet exercises with other Canadian ships off the coast.

•

The removal of fuel from these tanks is a standard procedure, he said.

A board of inquiry has been ordered.

The 20,000-ton carrier left here Monday afternoon on her last trip as a fighting ship before being decommissioned next April.

SMOULDERING ASHES and little more are all that remain today of a home for the aged in Notre Dame du Lac, Que., which was destroyed by fire. Between 68 and 72 persons were in the three-storey wooden building when the fire started and charred bodies were still being removed this morning. See also Page 38. (CP Wirephoto)

Moscow Warning NATO Plan's Goal

Times News Services

BRUSSELS — NATO defence ministers today approved plans to use nuclear weapons against Warsaw Pact nations in the event of a Communist attack in Europe.

No nuclear bombs would fall on Russia in the early stages of the conflict, diplomatic sources said, because NATO would hope to deter Russia by bombing her satellites.

If a Communist troop advance continued, Soviet targets would have to be considered in later stages, the meeting decided.

Approval of the NATO nuclear strike plan today comes as communist members of the Warsaw Pact are meeting in Moscow, apparently in search of a common policy toward friendship overtures made by West Germany, a NATO member nation.

Observers also feel it is likely the communist leaders like the Western Allies, are weighing the chances of an all-European security conference sometime next year.

During the same sesssion today in which the nuclear policy gained approval, Britain pledged to boost its NATO forces to plug a gap left by scheduled Canadian withdrawals from Europe.

Canada plans to reduce its NATO force stationed in West Germany by 4,800 men, about half its total there. British Defence Secretary Denis Healey said the relatively cheap measures he was proposing would make any raid on NATO airfields by enemy aircraft between 12 and 18 times more diffieult than it now would be.

FOUR TOP POINTS

The four main points he proposed:

- Retention of 42 RAF B-57 strike and reconnaissance planes which were scheduled for withdrawal from West Germany next year. They now will remain until 1971.
- Assignment of an additional RAF squadron of supersonic Lightning jet fighter-bombers to the Supreme Allied command in Europe in the event of crisis.
- Immediate strengthening of two major RAF airfields in West Germany with additional aircraft shelters, anti-aircraft guns and two ground-to-air guided-missile squadrons.
- Dispatch of British Signals troops to Northern Army group headquarters in West Germany to replace a Canadian unit scheduled for withdrawal.

Healey also said Britain hopes that the 6th Brigade of the British Army brought home last year will be able to rejoin the British Army of the Rhine soon.

But the return of the brigade depends on agreement with West Germany on meeting foreign-exchange costs, he said. Healey said he hoped to be able to announce a definite

Indian Protest Book Serialized

The Unjust Society, Alberta Indian leader Harold Cardinal's scathing book on the situation of Canada's native population, is to be released Thursday.

The same day, The Times publishes the first of a three-part condensation of the book, which has already raised a furor in federal government circles.

Cardinal charged Monday copies of the book had been obtained improperly by Indian affairs officials but had been returned to the publisher after a protest was lodged with Ottawa.

CYC Faces Trusteeship

OTTAWA (CP) — A Commons committee will recommend Friday that the Company of Young Canadians be placed in trusteeship for a year, an informed source said today.

The broadcasting committee, which carried out a month-long inquiry into the CYC, also will recommend that the government take direct control of the company and reorganize it.

A move to disband the company and replace it with a new body was beaten off by a 10-to-7 committee vote Tuesday.

The committee had a final meeting scheduled for today to prepare a report to be placed before the Commons Friday.

The committee has been meeting behind closed doors since Monday, considering what to do with the three-year-old CYC.

The inquiry was spurred by allegations of subversive elements within the CYC by Lucien Saulnier, Montreal executive committee chairman, who said the social action agency should be disbanded.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier, another witness, and CYC executive director Claude Vidal said the company should be reorganized to clarify lines of authority.

Meanwhile the Company of Young Canadians today suspended its controversial St. Henri project in Montreal because of "the political activities of the project."

A statement from the company said executive director Claude Vidal had ordered Pierre Renaud, the CYC's Quebec co-ordinator, to close the CYC office on Rue St. Philippe.

Mr. Vidal had ordered that "all activities on the project stop immediately, all spending of CYC funds cease, all CYC material be recuperated, and the office closed."

The project, known as the St. Henri worker's committee, Tuesday challenged Mayor Jean Drapeau and Lucien Saulnier, Montreal executive committee chairman, to face St. Henri residents at a public meeting.

It was the project's response to charges of subversive activity levelled at it before a Commons committee inquiry last week by Mr. Saulnier and Montreal attorney Michel Cote.

'Stood at the Gates of Hell' Says Quebec Fire Survivor

NOTRE - DAME - DU - LAC, Que. (CP) — "My wife and I stood at the gates of hell," Denis Violet, 87, a survivor of Tuesday's fire at a home for the aged here, said Wednesday. "Then the devil dragged her in but let me go."

His wife, Marie, 77, was one of the 38 victims of the fire that turned the private Repos du Vieillard into an inferno.

"My good Marie — why would the devil want to take her?" Denis Violet asked, his voice breaking and his body trembling as he tried to recount the story of his escape.

He said he and his wife had a room only five feet from a fire escape at the rear of the wooden building. But the fire escape was of no use to them.

When they got to it, the smoke was too thick to penetrate and they had to retreat along the corridor. Then it seemed to clear away for an instant and they shuffled back to the escape, only to see a huge gush of flames leap at them up the metal staircase.

They turned again towards the front door. Already the corridor felt like an oven. The soles of their feet were hot.

Suddenly a huge cloud of grey and yellow smoke rolled in on them from the back.

"I don't know why, but Marie slipped out of my arms," the distraught husband said.

"I turned around, tried to reach her with my hands. But the smoke was all around us and I couldn't see her, or even touch her.

"She was gone, she wasn't there anymore."

He finally reached safety by crawling along the corridor and out the front door. Some people had already gathered outside and they restrained him when he tried to go back into the building.

Mr. and Mrs. Violet had each been paying $99 a month for room and board at the Repos du Vieillard. Every month they handed their old-age pension cheques for $107 over to the management of the home and got back $8 each for incidental expenses.

Grit MP Quits Party Over Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Perry Ryan (L—Toronto Spadina) today quit the Liberal party to sit as an independent member of the Commons.

"I've come to the conclusion that I cannot give continued support" to the government, Ryan, a Toronto lawyer, told the House. He asked that he be seated as an independent.

There was desk-thumping applause from opposition members as Ryan, first elected to the Commons in 1962, made the announcement.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureaux said a seat would be found for Ryan.

After Ryan made his brief announcement, the only other independent MP, Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, said: "It would seem the honorable member has joined the ranks of the Independents."

Ryan, smiling broadly, nodded his assent.

Standing now in the 264-seat Commons: Liberals 153, Conservative 72, NDP 22, Creditiste 14, Independent 2, vacant 1.

Shortly after Ryan's announcement, Prime Minister Trudeau issued a news release in which he said he regretted the Liberal member's dicision.

"Of the issues which Ryan mentioned to me as grounds for his resignation," said Trudeau, "two formed part of the Liberal party platform in the 1968 general election. The third has been the subject of exhaustive discussions in caucus and in caucus committees on which occasions Liberal members played a full and effective role."

This is the first defection from the Liberal party since Trudeau assumed office in April, 1968. Although former Transport Minister Paul Hellyer left the cabinet earlier this year, he has remained a member of the party and MP for Toronto Trinity.

Giant Surf Destroys 81 Homes

HONOLULU (AP) — A swollen surf continued to batter Oahu's devastated north shore today where 81 homes were destroyed or damaged by 50-foot breakers. Officials called it Hawaii's worst natural disaster since a 1960 tidal wave.

Authorities reported at least two storm-related deaths, including that of a man swept out to sea by a monster wave. They said at least 15 persons were injured.

Dangerous surf warnings remained in an effect while hundreds of homeless carried belongings from wrecked houses amid a tangle of seaweed and coral.

Waves 20 to 30 feet high were again forecast today and coastal residents across the island from Honolulu were told they may have to leave their homes for the second straight day.

Family Planning Major USC Aim

In India there is a traditional belief that men must prove their virility by fathering a child each year.

And in a country where the mortality rate until recently was high a man and wife provided their own social insurance by having enough children to ensure they would be cared for in their old age.

The pattern of a child a year is centuries' old.

So, too, is the pattern of starvation.

Children are one of the few joys an Indian couple have in an existence that often consists of a daily struggle for survival.

The Indian government has introduced, with some success, family planning projects in urban areas.

But in the rural areas the traditions are more difficult to change.

In the Kodai mountains area of India the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada has introduced a pilot project in family planning.

Foundation revealed that people must discover the need for family planning through their concern for already existing children.

"Indian parents love their children very much," said Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, USC executive director.

"Family planning must be an educational process, stressing maternal and child welfare."

The USC has hired one of the first graduates of the Gardhigram Institute, which is training field workers in the new concept of teaching family planning.

A native of the Kodai region, he is travelling through 14 villages in that area attempting to convince parents of the logic of having fewer children and less hunger.

The family planning project is only one of more than 100 projects being carried out by the USC in eight countries.

Money raised in Victoria during the Children of Asia campaign will be used to buy milk and barley for children in India and Korea.

Donations of money should be sent to the Times office, 2631 Douglas. Donations of colthing and quilts can be dropped off at the USC depot, 2333 Government.

PRICES HEAD SEES INFLATION CURBED

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. John Young, head of the prices and incomes commission, was optimistic Tuesday about Canada's prospects of controlling inflation as he faced a Commons committee on supplementary estimates.

He was seeking an additional $626,000 to carry on the work of the commission.

Dr. Young agreed with Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) that the economic effects of the Vietnam war on the U.S. economy have "greatly influenced" the economic situation in Canada but insisted the two economics were not entirely locked together.

"The difference of opinion is over how long the string is."

Draft-Dodgers Meet U.S. Church Leaders

DETROIT (AP) — About a dozen leaders of the National Council of Churches of the United States returned today from a quiet, late-night mission across the border to Canada for a parley about American military draft-dodgers there.

Here for the council's triennial assembly, the churchmen made the brief excursion to Windor for a meeting with officials of the Canadian Council of Churches.

Six or seven young Americans, from among many who have fled to Canada to resist service in the Vietnam war, were reported to have attended.

The discussions were said to concern what kind of pastoral services U.S. churches could provide for the young exiles.

While they're plannin' th' next war couldn't they remember thet th' last few ain't turned out so well.

Military Appeals Court Says No To News Ban on Massacre Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Military Appeals has ruled out a ban on further news and pictures about the alleged massacre of South Vietnamese civilians at the village of My Lai.

Tuesday's unanimous decision emphasized that the colonel who will preside at the court martial of Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. seems to have all the power he needs to screen out any prejudicial publicity.

Publishers have the job of seeing that news stories are proper and accurate, the decision said, and military judges have the job of guarding court martials against outside influences.

"Neither should be permitted to overwhelm the other," the unsigned opinion said, "for both a responsible press and a fair trial are constitutionally protected."

The ruling seems to support the view that gags on the press have not been authorized by the U.S. Supreme Court and are probably unnecessary to assure a defendant a fair trial.

Moreover, the decision evidently does not accept the popular notion that a clash between the public's right to know and the defendant's right to a fair trial is inevitable.

Maj. Kenneth Raby, Calley's military defence counsel, and Capt. Aubrey Daniel, the prosecutor, had asked jointly that the court issue a pre-trial injunction against all American radio and television networks and stations, news services, newspapers and magazines.

They would have been ordered "to cease further publication, broadcasting, televising or otherwise disseminating through any mass means of communication, any, accounts, quotations, or statements by any person concerning any acts or events which were allegedly witnessed by him or her" in the Vietnam village March 16, 1968.

They also would have prohibited use of "any photographs, sketches, or other pictorial reproductions purporting to represent the bodies of persons allegedly killed in the village."

Calley, now stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., has been charged with the murder of 109 Vietnamese civilians in the village that day. He was then an army platoon leader.

There is considerable doubt the military appeals court has the authority to issue the kind of injunction sought against the media or that it could be enforced.

ONE-UPMANSHIP INVENTOR DIES

TIMES NEWS SERVICE

LONDON — Satirist and humorist Stephen Potter died here Tuesday at 69 years.

Potter, best-known for his "one-upmanship" theory as expounded in the book of the same title, was also a serious scholar. In 1930 he published a study of D. H. Lawrence and in 1935 one of Samuel Taylor Coleridge.

Educated at Westminster and Merton College, Oxford, he was a lecturer in English at various universities.

Potter, who emergel as a humorist with publication of The Theory and Practice of Gamesmanship, or the Art of Winning Games Without Actually Cheating, in 1947, died in hospital of unannounced causes.

His humor was unique, consisting primarily of a scientific and sympathetic analysis of different types of humbug, which he solemnly described as a principle to be followed.

BIRDSONG
... with The Supremes

Singer Escapes Kidnapper

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Cynthia Ann Birdsong, 30, a member of the soul singing group The Supremes, was held for more than one hour at knife-point by a barefoot kidnapper Tuesday night before she jumped from a speeding car on the Long Beach Freeway.

Miss Birdsong suffered bruises from her jump and was reported in satisfactory condition at Long Beach Memorial Hospital. She also was treated for minor knife slashes.

Police said the kidnapper, wearing a brown leather jacket, was hiding in a bedroom of the singer's Hollywood home when she returned in the evening.

Two friends, Charles Hewlett, 25, and Howard Meak, 25, had gone to the home earlier and were waiting for Miss Birdsong. They apparently were unaware of the intruder in the bedroom.

The man put a large knife to her neck when she entered the bedroom and, holding the knife under her chin, forced her to bind the two other men with their ties.

She was then forced to her car and held at knife-point as the man drove toward Long Beach.

Police said she jumped from the car and rolled across onto the edge of the freeway. She got up and ran against traffic until she was found by two California highway patrolmen.

First Sentence Under New Law

A 43-year-old city man, the first arrested in the area under the new federal drinking-driving legislation, was sentenced to two months in jail in court Tuesday and prohibited from driving for a year.

Allan Stewart, 39 Ontario, was charged with impaired driving early Tuesday morning by Saanich police after his car was stopped because it had no lights on.

The new drinking-driving legislation, which came into force Monday, gives police authority to demand a breath test from suspect drivers.

Stewart's test produced a reading of .13 per cent alcohol in his blood. It is now an offence to have more than .08.

Court was told the accused had just completed a 15-day jail term Saturday for intoxicated driving and had an earlier conviction in Alberta for impaired driving.

Judge William Ostler in sentencing the accused remarked that Stewart "seems to be self-destructive."

Fast Urged At Hunger Meet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mexican-Americans at a White House hunger conference urged their 3,000 fellow participants today to fast during the remainder of the session in protest of President Nixon's keynote speech and the "way the conference is going."

The Mexican-Americans asked other delegates to join them in depositing the remainder of their meal tickets in a box in a hallway at the site of the three-day meeting that ends Thursday.

"Spending $18.30 a day for meals, in my mind, is almost immoral when we are here to help the hungry," said Rev. Ralph Ruiz of San Antonio, Tex.

The call for a fast was just one expression of bitter criticism following Nixon's plea Tuesday for support of his legislative programs to fight poverty.

"The president has not called for any emergency relief for the nation's hungry," Ruiz said.

Jury Blames Faulty Crane On Death

A coroner's jury Tuesday night ruled misadventure and an inadequate mobile crane sling as causing the death of 22-year-old Victoria building laborer Nov. 26.

Americo C. de Frias, 2525 Shakespeare, died in a fall from a third-floor balcony at an apartment construction site in Esquimalt when the sling of particle board he was helping to unload tipped and knocked him to the ground.

The particle board load fell on top of him.

SCHOOL GETS WORKSHOP ADDITION

The provincial government Tuesday announced approval of a $59,146 addition to Saanich junior secondar, including a classroom-workshop for woodworking and electrical instruction.

The new space will complete additions planned under a 1968 $4 million referendum by the Saanich Peninsula school board.

Buildings and grounds superintendent Bryan Shaw said about $2.8 million have been committed to additions. The remaining $1.2 million will go toward interior renovations over the next two years.

Loan Approved

British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority has been authorized by the provincial cabinet to borrow up to $10 million by issuing of 25-year sinking fund bonds at an interest rate of eight per cent.

Bulgaria Almost Sure Of World Soccer Spot

LONDON (AP) — Three spots are left for the 16-team World Soccer Cup finals in Mexico next year and one of them almost certainly will go to Bulgaria.

The other two places rest on playoffs with Czechoslovakia meeting Hungary and Australia tackling Israel.

Italy, West Germany, Belgium, Sweden, Russia, Romania and defending champions England are through to the finals.

Those teams will represent Europe in the prestige tournament for soccer players and fans throughout the world.

El Salvador, Brazil, Uruguay, Mexico and Peru are through for the American continent.

Morocco is through for Africa.

Bulgaria plays Luxembourg away from home Dec. 7 and stands out as the favorite to win that group.

Luxembourg has lost all its five games so far. But an upset victory by Luxembourg could let in Poland.

Nickel Thieves Get Third Haul

A third nickel-anode theft in the Victoria area in less than a month has left the nickel-plating process industry on the island with an indefinite future.

Thieves over the weekend stole 15 nickel ingots from Vancouver Island Plating Ltd., 438 Kingston, and manager C. W. Beardsley said this morning the theft put his one-man operation temporarily out of business.

There is a current world nicle shortage aggravated by the recent strike of International Nickel in Ontario and this has lead to a rash of similar thefts across Canada and the United States to supply the increased black-market activities primarily in the U.S.

Both local police and Beardsley feel the U.S. is the eventual destination of the stolen anodes.

This most recent robbery was the second within four weeks for Vancouver Island Plating.

On Nov. 11, the shop lost about half of its anode supply to thieves and Beardsley felt at the time there could be a possible second break-in.

Victoria Plating Ltd., 892 Devonshire, had 36 nickel-anodes stolen two weeks ago and manager George South delined comment on the firm's immediate future business.

Beardsley said though the nickel costs about $1.30 a pound for him to buy with the shortage prices could rise to $6.51 a pound and possibly as high as $15 a pound on the black market.

Driving Week Road Deaths Zero Here

British Columbia remains fatality-free as Safe Driving Weed approaches the halfway point.

There was only one highway death reported throughout Canada Tuesday, the second day of the week.

The lont fatality was recorded in Nova Scotia, bringing that province's total to date to two and leaving Ontario and New Brunswick at the top of the death list with four deaths each reported Monday.

The nationwide total after the first two days of Safe Driving Week was 11 fatalities.

The week's toll last year was 49 dead.

Six-Month Jail Term For Ex-Vets' President

UCLUELET — B. Alfred Lock, ex-president of the Army, Navy and Air Force Veterans' Association here, has been sentenced to six months in jail for stealing $531 from the club's premises.

The bar manager testified that on May 25 last he found both the front and inside door of the bar had been forced open. The safe had been broken into and was empty.

The day after, Lock left Ucluelet by car for Vancouver. He was stopped by RCMP at Port Alberni, his car was searched and $355 was found on him, court was told.

A screwdriver in the car was sent to the crime research laboratory in Vancouver and identified as the one used in breaking into the club bar at Ucluelet.

Lock was remanded for sentence.

decision on return of the brigade at the next NATO ministerial conference in May.

REPLACE CANADIANS?

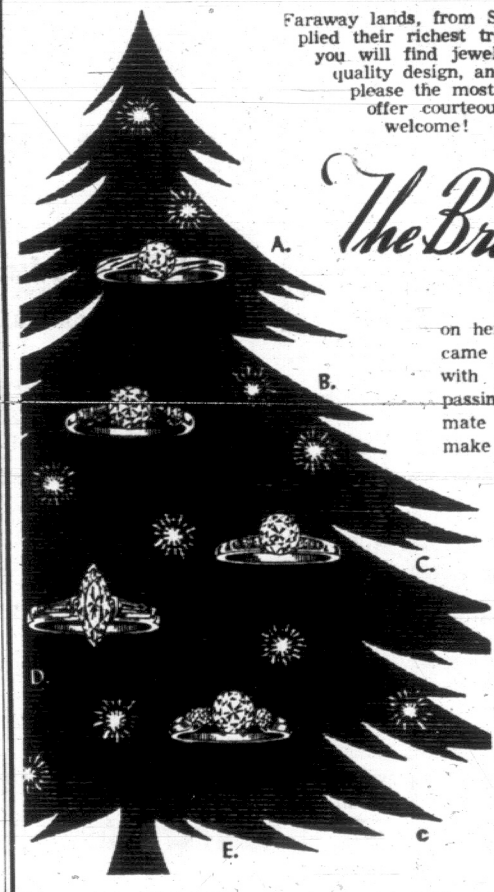

If the brigade is reassigned to NATO forces in West Germany, it could replace a Canadian armored unit scheduled for withdrawal. West Germany is planning to assign a tank regiment and an airborne brigade to NATO's First Corps in northern West Germany to plug the gap left by withdrawal of the Canadian army unit late next year.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

Man is continually learning that he cannot escape the weather. It affects him in many and different ways, including his behavior.

When rain storms accompanied by thunder and lightning come down on us, there are more auto accidents than when the weather is good. You might think that it is the rain and the thunder that get drivers into accidents. In a roundabout way, perhaps. It is the atmospheric electricity in the air, caused by the storm, that affects drivers.

No matter how good you are at the wheel of a car, your driver reaction time is, on the average, slowed down when there is a marked change in number of charged ions in the atmosphere. When this evidence of atmospheric electricty goes away with the storm and the weather is back to normal, driver reaction time speeds up and there are not likely to be so many accidents.

DISGRUNTLED FISHERMEN at Fishermen's Wharf wonder when they'll get some government action on their problem. Discussing measures to meet the emergency are, left to right, Ted Evans, Gus Broshell, Ed Brownlee and John Wilson. In his eighties, Wilson, says he'll be unable to spend the winter aboard his boat If 11. "I guess I'm going to be forced ashore."

Fire Hazard Feared At Fishermen's Dock

Candles Even Used After Power Cut

By PAT DUFOUR

Fishermen's Wharf could be a major fire hazard in the city this winter.

Power to the wharf has been cut off since the federal public works department rebuilt the jetties in August. All the power lines were removed before the work was started. They have not been replaced.

To combat the deficiency, fishermen living aboard their boats say they are using every means in their power to keep warm and maintain equipment.

One is using candles for light. Others are humping down coal, oil heaters or gasoline motors.

The city leases the wharf, located at the foot of Erie, from the federal transport department on a yearly basis but is powerless to remedy the situation.

City engineer James Garnett explains: "When any electrical work is renewed, or replaced, it has to meet the current electrical code standards which are set by federal law.

"The department of public works should have known this and budgeted the extra money needed when they rebuilt the jetties. They didn't do this and now they have to go through the long process of putting the job out to tender, going back to the treasury for extra funds, and eventually getting the work done."

'I Would Shout Like Hell'

Garnett says the fishermen have a real beef.

"If I was in their place I would be belly-aching and shouting like hell."

In Vancouver, Warren Parkinson, superintendent of construction for the works department, admitted it would be quite a while before the fishermen could expect action.

"We have been arguing with the City of Victoria's electrical inspector for weeks. Things came to a head about 10 days ago — and I guess we lost the argument."

Asked how far his department had gone with the project, he said they still have not appointed an electrical consultant to draw up plans.

Gus Broshell, who lives aboard his 38-foot troller Early Dawn II, says his buddies are wrong to lay the blame with city hall.

"It's not their fault but we sure should get some pretty fast action from the federal department."

He points out that, apart from creating a fire hazard, lack of power means lack of navigational safety.

"We don't have the usual red lights at the end of the piles anymore. In fog or at night when some of the tugs go by full belt—there's a real risk."

Lawren Meyer, 440 Simcoe, says the old system of power was "two-bitting me to death."

He and other fishermen hope that the new system—when they get it—will be a fairer one.

"Here we had only two meters on each long finger. We kept putting in quarters all day long. We should have something like they have at Port Alberni where power is averaged out between everyone."

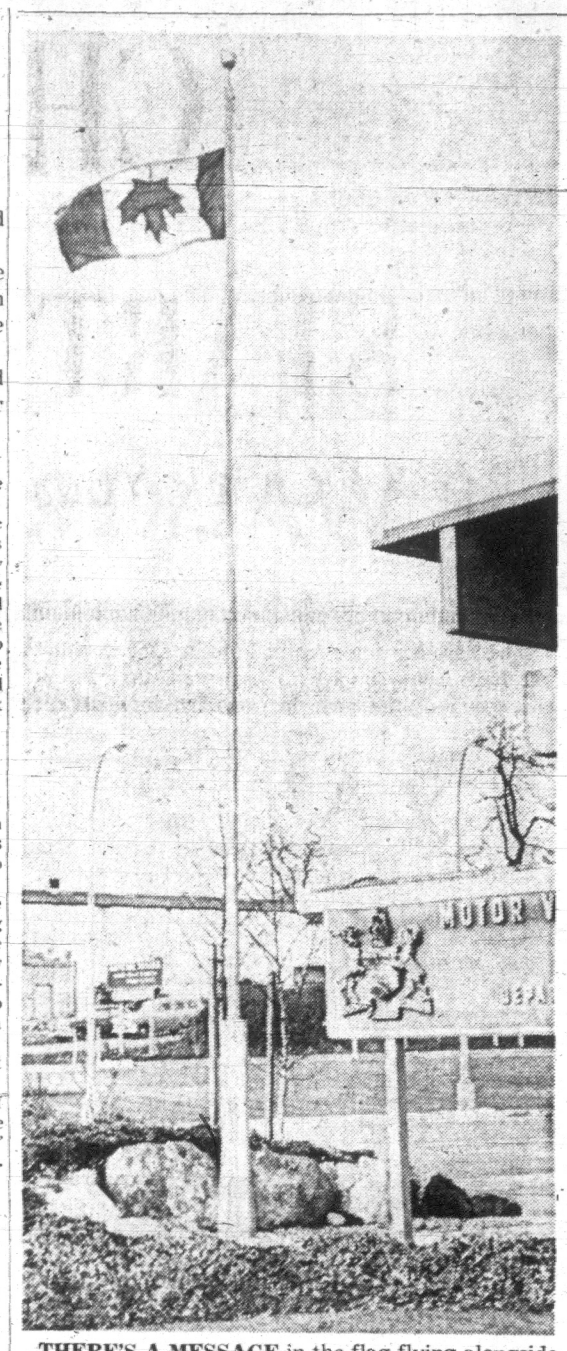

Ed Brownlee, 25 Ontario, estimates the loss of power will cost the fishermen thousands of dollars.

"A lot of us rely on heat lamps in the engine room, especially when there's frost. Half the batteries in the fleet are dead now, even though we've been running our engines and burning up fuel to keep things going."

Although several of the fishermen feel they're paying too high a price for wharfage and power, city statistics show that $9,608 was spent on Fishermen's Wharf from January to the end of October against a revenue of $7,881.

Garnett says it is a deficit operation for the city.

"We operate on a budget of $11,315 and we'll likely receive $10,800 by the end of the year."

THERE'S A MESSAGE in the flag flying alongside the Motor Vehicle Inspection Station on McKenzie. But which message? Upside-down emblem may mean traffic officials are in distress or have even surrendered, only half-way through Safe Driving Week. Or has the arrival of December caused ALL the leaves to fall? (Irving Strickland Photo).

INQUEST THURSDAY

An inquest into the death of a 13-year-old American boy killed on Sooke Road has been set for Thursday at 7 p.m. in the Sooke RCMP station.

Randy Cassell, 13, of Mount Vernon, Wash., died in St. Joseph's Hospital after he and 12-year-old Terry Wilson of Sooke were hit by a truck Nov. 28. Terry is recovering from minor injuries.

CIVIC ELECTION WATCH

Parading Out Two Socreds Adds Up to One-Upmanship

By JIM HUME

The disposition of Social Credit party faithful in the present Victoria civic election creates a fascinating political situation.

While all candidates claim to have risen above and beyond party ties, at least two mayoralty candidates have been on display with cabinet ministers, ex-cabinet ministers or just plain old MLAs.

A third has the support of former Social Credit stalwart Hugh Ramsay.

Courtney Haddock was the first to pull a ranking Socred out of the hat.

At a press conference at the Imperial Inn he proudly introduced former Health Minister Eric Martin who in turn proudly introduced Haddock. It was one of the better days for back-slapping.

●

Not to be outdone Ald. Robert Baird had Public Works Minister W. N. Chant and MLA John Tisdalle front and centre for a miniature rally.

Oneupmanship is wonderful game at election time.

Both were careful to point out that these were just personal friends and did not indicate party support.

Who's Hugh Ramsay supporting? Actively, nobody. But he makes no secret of the fact that his sympathies lie with Ald. Ian Stewart purely on the grounds that in Ramsay's opinion he's the best man for the mayor's job.

It's no secret, of course, that while Stewart may have picked up support from other political faiths, his core organization is Liberal.

●

There are still no bets out—except by individual candidate supporters—among sideline observers. It's a three-way race and could go any way. But it does present us with the rarity of a divided Socred group with a three-way split to a bulky vote.

And if you don't believe the voters are divided and confused on this one, recall what you read Monday about people who signed nomination papers.

Haddock's papers were signed by Peter Pollen.

In turn Pollen's papers were signed by Halet F. Hallat, who just happens to be Stewart's law partner. Hallat staunchly supports Stewart for mayor.

By nine o'clock Saturday night we should be able to find out how they finally sorted it out behind the polling booth curtains.

Victoria isn't the only municipality to have an interesting fight on its hands.

In Esquimalt retired naval Captain—Surgeon Dr. J. W. Rogers is taking a hard run at Arthur G. Young.

It is interesting because this marks Rogers' third attempt to crack the Esquimalt nut. Not an easy task with Mayor Ray Bryant openly supporting Young. Across the Selkirk Water that support isn't discarded lightly.

●

The other big hurdle Rogers must surmount, and it's quite a formidable one, is that all members of Esquimalt council openly, or behind the scenes, also support Young.

On the surface Rogers' promise to let a little daylight into Esquimalt affairs makes the most sense, but it's never been easy to buck the status quo.

Behind the tweed curtain Frances Elford and Walter Dodsworth are conducting their battle with all the decorum of a crumpet party.

It will probably continue that way right down to the wire.

FINAL SHOTS DUE THURSDAY NIGHT

An all-out effort that might amount to the last official gasp for some civic candidates comes when Victoria Jaycees mount four all-candidates meetings at 8 p.m. Thursday.

Victoria's meeting will be in Central Junior Secondary, 1280 Fort, Saanich's in Mount View Senior, 3814 Carey, Esquimalt's in Esquimalt Junior 637 Head, and Oak Bay's in Oak Bay Senior, 2151 Cranmore.

Board Candidates Angered by Snub

School board candidates from Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich are indignant at being left out of all-candidates meetings Victoria Jaycees are sponsoring Thursday night.

Candidates for the Greater Victoria board are wondering why, with a budget more than five times bigger than the Oak Bay municipal budget, their views aren't as important as those of mayoralty and aldermanic candidates.

And several candidates supported a suggestion that, in future, separate meetings should be held for school board hopefuls so that the public can find out what they have to say.

It's too late now to hold special meetings for the trustee candidates. The all-candidates meetings will take place Thursday in Esquimalt, Victoria, Oak Bay and Saanich, and all campaigns will have ended by Friday. Voters go to the polls Saturday.

★ ★ ★

Jaycee vice-president Gary Weir said today that sheer numbers of candidates for all public posts had forced the club to limit the Thursday forums to mayoralty and aldermanic candidates.

"I can't think of anything other than to hope the people can make a wise choice on the basis of what little they know about us," said Dr. Martin Scherzer, an orthodontist and one of seven candidates in the running for two vacant Victoria seats on the school district 61 board.

Most candidates are relying on newspaper advertisements, handbills, radio appearances or conversations with individuals to make themselves known.

Retired educator J. Lloyd Brereton, another candidate for a Victoria seat, said students could arrange for trustees to speak on panels at the schools. He said the students could insist their parents attend such meetings.

★ ★ ★

Others running for the Victoria seats include incumbent Dr. Victor Rodgers, housewife Mrs. Daphne Temple, retired radio operator Joseph Haggert, real estate man John H. Ledger and barber Leonard Stephenson.

In Oak Bay incumbent Peter Bunn and challenger Thomas Crone plan to attend a Project Learning meeting at Oak Bay Junior Secondary Thursday.

In urban Saanich, six candidates are contesting one vacant seat on the Greater Victoria board.

Purchasing officer Douglas Brown said not being invited to the all-candidates meeting will adversely affect his campaign because he didn't decide to run until the last minute.

Other candidates include apprentice drywaller John Fry, printer's assistant William Hibbert, management consultant Harold Knight, life underwriter Richard Reeve, and federal civil servant Joseph Rey.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you please enlighten me whether one has to be a property owner in Victoria in order to vote in civic elections, or are apartment dwellers disenfranchised by a civic law? T.R.

A. Apartment dwellers, or renters of homes are not disenfranchised. They can vote, but only if they take the time and trouble to register at the local municipal hall or, if they are already on the voters' list, re-confirm their address each year. Deadline for registering is the end of September. Each year, just before the deadline newspapers run stories and municipalities run a series of advertisements. If the stories, advertisement and deadlines were missed it is now too late to vote this year. The responsibility to ensure that a name is on the list belongs to the individual.

IT'S LIKELY TO HAPPEN

What Is Yellow and Wails?

Yellow fire trucks?

It's enough to send red-loving traditionalists to the wall.

But Victoria Fire Chief Eric Simmons is going to recommend the color change to the city fire wardens committee.

The reason: heavier traffic and the fact that red is not readily visibe at night (begins to look black) and is confusing in day time because of so many other red vehicles.

Simmons said the change, if approved, will add to the safety of the public and of the firefighters.

"I got a study from Dave Campbell, city traffic engineer, that pastel is better than a dark color but yellow is best," he said.

To the yellow would be added black stripes at the rear — for emphasis.

City fire trucks need re-painting (in whatever color) in 1970, said Simmons, so he will recommend the color change then.

He also said that suburban Seattle communities have switched to yellow and in Toronto, police prowler cars have changed to yellow — with black stripes on the front and back.

Asked what he thought of white as a new color, he said the only problem is "we have a lot of fog and it fades in fog whereas yellow stands out."

Arthur Mayse . . .

MUCH AS IT PAINS ME to point this out, discrimination runs wild in Victoria each Sunday.

Consider the facts.

If music happens to be your kick, you can buy a ticket to a Victoria Symphony concert and enjoy the performance of paid musicians.

But you can't take in a paid-admission motion picture. No, no. Never on a Sunday.

Also, should this be your choice, you can pay green fees at any public golf course, and even though it's Sunday, the law won't bat an eye. Nor will it where the sale of gallery tickets to golf tournaments that bracket the Sabbath is concerned.

★

But, goofily, the promoter who charges fixed admission to a variety of spectator sports events may wind up in court.

This, to repeat, is discrimination. It gives some forms of paid entertainment carte blanche, while it penalizes others which are surely no less acceptable as Sunday relaxation.

★

This hypocritical measure has led to all manner of ridiculous evasions. The movie that begins a minute or two after Sunday midnight is one of them. Another is the game or entertainment for which no fee is officially charged. You don't pay to get in . . . you make a donation, with the tacit understanding that it will consist of a prearranged sum.

Or, if you are willing to take a chance, you sell tickets outright, and hope the law will turn its head the other way.

This double standard does no credit to the city that tolerates it. If we don't mean to apply the Sunday restriction across the board, we should lose no time in junking it.

Voters of four municipalities will decide the matter for their respective baliwicks at the polls on Saturday. As an opponent of blue Sunday laws I hope they will remove the ghostly hand of the Lord's Day Act from our necks.

It's been there too long. For honesty's sake as well as an end to petty and pointless restriction of legitimate enjoyment, I think we should be rid of it.

A WHILE AGO I TOLD you about Kelly Covin, the hard-working south Island writer who capped a run of television script sales to American networks by scoring with a novel in New York and Hollywood.

★

What I didn't get around to passing on is that Covin made a determined effort to woo the CBC into accepting scripts before he decided that his chances might be better to the south.

One of those TV tales was based on a Vancouver Island court case that posed a problem and raised an issue. Is the Indian entitled to the treaty-guaranteed hunting rights alloted to his ancestors, or is he bound by white man's game laws?

★

Covin pondered the episode, then used it as a springboard for a script which he mailed off to Canada's government-sponsored network. CBC, he says, kept the rejection score at 100 per cent by tossing the effort back at him.

Undaunted, Covin switched the background from Vancouver Island to Washington State, and sold his piece to a U.S. network for a very pretty penny.

The Indians whose deer-slaying sparked his interpretation? They won a reversal of the judgment against them on appeal.

REPORT TO HAND FROM Mrs. F. W. Chaney, the worker with emotionally disturbed children who discovered that wielding knitting needles and counting stitches helps them bridge the gap between the fantasy world and reality.

Mrs. Chaney is most grateful to the several Victorians who have helped renew her depleted wool supply, and hopes to hear from others with odds and ends of thick yarn to spare.

★

Address to send oddments is 1715 Rockland. If it's handier, leave at The Card Gallery, 1304 Douglas, for pickup. For further information call 479-2830 any evening.

That's it for this day, except to report that we have taken the first plunge into Christmas shopping. Came up with a gimmicky little gravy boat that sits on a spindle-legged stand with candle below.

No gift, this. Brazenly we decided to keep it for ourselves!

WHAT'S MORE IMPORTANT
A GOOD DEAL ON A BOAT OR A GOOD BOAT DEALER

There are places where you can get such a "terrific deal" on a boat that you've got no comeback. Especially when you need to come back. Face it, no boat is flawless. So you need a come-back with a good dealer. One who sees that you get the right boat running right when you get it. One who'll help you keep it running right for years. Without copping out.

Are we good dealers?

Would Bertram let us handle Bertrams if we weren't?

FUMES KILL FOUR SAILORS

HALIFAX (CP) — Four crew members of the Canadian aircraft carrier Bonaventure died early today after they were overcome by aviation gasoline fumes aboard ship during fleet exercises off the coast.

The victims were identified as LS Gary Swim, Halifax; LS Gordon Hayes Morrell, Halifax; LS Donaid Raymond Patterson, Halifax, and OS John Boulter, Summerside, P.E.I.

●

Vice-Admiral J. C. O'Brien, commander Maritime Command, said the men were venting fuel tanks aboard the carrier when they were asphyxiated.

A board of inquiry has been ordered.

The carrier left here Monday afternoon on her last trip as a fighting ship before being decommissioned next April.

Bonner in Business With Brewer Chief

VANCOUVER (CP)—The administrator of the British Columbia Brewers' Institute testified Tuesday he and the then-Attorney-General Robert Bonner entered a business partnership involving an apartment in 1967.

The attorney-general's department is responsible for the provincial Liquor Act. The institute is an organization formed by the province's four major breweries—Carlings, O'Keefe's, Labatt's and Molson's.

Arthur Fouks, institute administrator, told the B.C. enquiry into provincial liquor laws he and Mr. Bonner, now a senior executive with MacMillan, Bloedel Ltd., had been partners in an apartment building for about 2½ years. Mr. Bonner resigned his portfolio May 27, 1968.

Mr. Foulks appeared before the commission to explain the working of the institute and to deny statements made by brewer Ben Ginter of Prince George Sept 9.

At that session of the commission, Mr. Ginter said he had been referred to Foulks on a matter involving Ginter's Tartan Breweries Ltd.

Mr. Ginter quoted Foulks as saying, "Well, for a $10,000 retainer I will take a look at it and see what I can do."

Mr. Foulks denied he ever talked to Mr. Ginter on the matter and denied he had ever made such a statement.

The business connection between Mr. Foulks and Mr. Bonner developed out of written questions put to Foulks by Ginter.

The question: "What is your relationship with Mr. Bonner?"

Reply: "My relationship with Mr. Bonner is one of friendship since 1938. My relationship (with Bonner) in respect to the institute is absolutely nothing. It never has been and it isn't at this time."

The question: "Are you business partners?"

Reply: "The answer is yes . . . Mr. Bonner and myself are partners in an apartment and have been for 2½ years to the best of my knowledge. I may be off base by a few months . . ."

In another reply, Mr. Foulks said the apartment partnership is the only financial involvement between him and Mr. Bonner.

Mr. Foulks said he had also acted as fiscal agent for Mr. Bonner during an election campiagn but at no time did he receive any funds for the free enterprise education fund, the Social Credit fund-raising organization.

In his statement to the commission Mr. Foulks said that since the Sept. 9 hearing "distortions and innuendos have been made inferring that I have had extensive dealings with the Liquor Control Board.

"In the 20 years I have been practising law I have never acted for a distillery or for a winery in any matter," he said.

"With the exception of holding a watching brief at these hearings and holding the position of administrator of the British Columbia Brewers' Instute. I have never acted for a brewery in any matter."

A year ago today it had climbed to a closing 1968 high of 985.21.

The market's decline was wide-ranging, with losses topping gains by a margin of 2 to 1. (See Page 10.)

SMOULDERING ASHES and little more are all that remain today of a home for the aged in Notre Dame du Lac, Que., which was destroyed by fire. Between 68 and 72 persons were in the three-storey wooden building when the fire started and charred bodies were still being removed this morning. The death toll was set at 38. See also Page 38. (CP Wirephoto)

'Stood at the Gates of Hell' Says Quebec Fire Survivor

NOTRE-DAME-DU-LAC, Que. (CP) — "My wife and I stood at the gates of hell," Denis Violet, 87, a survivor of Tuesday's fire at a home for the aged here, said today. "Then the devil dragged her in but let me go."

His wife, Marie, 77, was one of the 38 victims of the fire that turned the private Repos du Vieillard into an inferno.

"My good Marie—why would the devil want to take her?" Denis Violet asked, his voice breaking and his body trembling as he tried to recount the story of his escape.

He said he and his wife had a room only five feet from a fire escape at the rear of the wooden building. But the fire escape was of no use to them.

When they got to it, the smoke was too thick to penetrate and they had to retreat along the corridor. Then it seemed to clear away for an instant and they shuffled back to the escape, only to see a huge gush of flames leap at them up the metal staircase.

They turned again towards the front door. Already the corridor felt like an oven. The soles of their feet were hot.

Suddenly a huge cloud of grey and yellow smoke rolled in on them from the back.

"I don't know why, but Marie slipped out of my arms," the distraught husband said.

"I turned around, tried to reach her with my hands. But the smoke was all around us and I couldn't see her, or even touch her.

"She was gone, she wasn't there anymore."

He finally reached safety by crawling along the corridor and out the front door. Some people had already gathered outside and they restrained him when he tried to go back into the building.

Mr. and Mrs. Violet had each been paying $99 a month for room and board at the Repos du Vieillard. Every month they handed their old-age pension cheques for $107 over to the management of the home and got back $8 each for incidental expenses.

Family Planning Major USC Aim

In India there is a traditional belief that men must prove their virility by fathering a child each year.

And in a country where the mortality rate until recently was high a man and wife provided their own social insurance by having enough children to ensure they would be cared for in their old age.

The pattern of a child a year is centuries' old.

So, too, is the pattern of starvation.

Children are one of the few joys an Indian couple have in an existence that often consists of a daily struggle for survival.

The Indian government has introduced, with some success, family planning projects in urban areas.

But in the rural areas the traditions are more difficult to change.

In the Kodai mountains area of India the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada has introduced a pilot project in family planning.

Donor List, Page 3

Foundation revealed that people must discover the need for family planning through their concern for already existing children.

"Indian parents love their children very much," said Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, USC executive director.

"Family planning must be an educational process, stressing maternal and child welfare."

The USC has hired one of the first graduates of the Gardhigram Institute, which is training field workers in the new concept of teaching family planning.

A native of the Kodai region, he is travelling through 14 villages in that area attempting to convince parents of the logic of having fewer children and less hunger.

The family planning project is only one of more than 100 projects being carried out by the USC in eight countries.

Money raised in Victoria during the Children of Asia campaign will be used to buy milk and barley for children in India and Korea.

Donations of money should be sent to the Times office, 2631 Douglas. Donations of colthing and quilts can be dropped off at the USC depot, 2333 Government.

PRICES HEAD SEES INFLATION CURBED

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. John Young, head of the prices and incomes commission, was optimistic Tuesday about Canada's prospects of controlling inflation as he faced a Commons committee on supplementary estimates.

He was seeking an additional $626,000 to carry on the work of the commission.

Dr. Young agreed with Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) that the economic effects of the Vietnam war on the U.S. economy have "greatly influenced" the economic situation in Canada but insisted the two economics were not entirely locked together.

"The difference of opinion is over how long the string is."

Military Appeals Court Says No To News Ban on Massacre Story

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Court of Military Appeals has ruled out a ban on further news and pictures about the alleged massacre of South Vietnamese civilians at the village of My Lai.

Tuesday's unanimous decision emphasized that the colonel who will preside at the court martial of Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. seems to have all the power he needs to screen out any prejudicial publicity.

Publishers have the job of seeing that news stories are proper and accurate, the decision said, and military judges have the job of guarding court martials against outside influences.

"Neither should be permitted to overwhelm the other," the unsigned opinion said, "for both a responsible press and a fair trial are constitutionally protected."

The ruling seems to support the view that gags on the press have not been authorized by the U.S. Supreme Court and are probably unnecessary to assure a defendant a fair trial.

Moreover, the decision evidently does not accept the popular notion that a clash between the public's right to know and the defendant's right to a fair trial is inevitable.

Maj. Kenneth Raby, Calley's military defence counsel, and Capt. Aubrey Daniel, the prosecutor, had asked jointly that the court issue a pre-trial injunction against all American radio and television networks and stations, news services, newspapers and magazines.

They would have been ordered "to cease further publication, broadcasting, televising or otherwise disseminating through any mass means of communication, any accounts, quotations, or statements by any person concerning any acts or events which were allegedly witnessed by him or her" in the Vietnam village March 16, 1968.

They also would have prohibited use of "any photographs, sketches, or other pictorial reproductions purporting to represent the bodies of persons allegedly killed in the village."

Calley, now stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., has been charged with the murder of 109 Vietnamese civilians in the village that day. He was then an army platoon leader.

There is considerable doubt the military appeals court has the authority to issue the kind of injunction sought against the media or that it could be enforced.

Nuclear Strike Plan Approved

Times News Services

BRUSSELS — NATO defence ministers today approved plans to use nuclear weapons against Warsaw Pact nations in the event of a Communist attack in Europe.

No nuclear bombs would fall on Russia in the early stages of the conflict, diplomatic sources said, because NATO would hope to deter Russia by bombing her satellites.

If a Communist troop advance continued, Soviet targets would have to be considered in later stages, the meeting decided.

Approval of the NATO nuclear strike plan today comes as communist members of the Warsaw Pact are meeting in Moscow, apparently in search of a common policy toward friendship overtures made by West Germany, a NATO member nation.

Observers also feel it is likely the communist leaders like the Western Allies, are weighing the chances of an all-European security conference sometime next year.

During the same sesssion today in which the nuclear policy gained approval, Britain pledged to boost its NATO forces to plug a gap left by scheduled Canadian withdrawals from Europe.

Canada plans to reduce its NATO force stationed in West Germany by 4,800 men, about half its total there. British Defence Secretary Denis Healey said the relatively cheap measures he was proposing would make any raid on NATO airfields by enemy aircraft between 12 and 18 times more difficult than it now would be.

FOUR TOP POINTS

The four main points he proposed:

- Retention of 42 RAF B-57 strike and reconnaissance planes which were scheduled for withdrawal from West Germany next year. They now will remain until 1971.
- Assignment of an additional RAF squadron of supersonic Lightning jet fighter-bombers to the Supreme Allied command in Europe in the event of crisis.
- Immediate strengthening of two major RAF airfields in West Germany with additional aircraft shelters, anti-aircraft guns and two ground-to-air guided-missile squadrons.
- Dispatch of British Signals troops to Northern Army group headquarters in West Germany to replace a Canadian unit scheduled for withdrawal.

Healey also said Britain hopes that the 6th Brigade of the British Army—brought home last year—will be able to rejoin the British Army of the Rhine soon.

But the return of the brigade depends on agreement with West Germany on meeting foreign-exchange costs, he said. Healey said he hoped to be able to announce a definite

Grit MP Quits Party Over Policy

OTTAWA (CP) — Perry Ryan (L—Toronto Spadina) today quit the Liberal party to sit as an independent member of the Commons.

"I've come to the conclusion that I cannot give continued support" to the government, Ryan, a Toronto lawyer, told the House. He asked that he be seated as an independent.

There was desk-thumping applause from opposition members as Ryan, first elected to the Commons in 1962, made the announcement.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureaux said a seat would be found for Ryan.

After Ryan made his brief announcement, the only other independent MP, Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, said: "It would seem the honorable member has joined the ranks of the Independents."

Ryan, smiling broadly, nodded his assent.

Standing now in the 264-seat Commons: Liberals 153, Conservative 72, NDP 22, Creditiste 14, Independent 2, vacant 1.

Shortly after Ryan's announcement, Prime Minister Trudeau issued a news release in which he said he regretted the Liberal member's decision.

"Of the issues which Ryan mentioned to me as grounds for his resignation," said Trudeau, "two formed part of the Liberal party platform in the 1968 general election. The third has been the subject of exhaustive discussions in caucus and in caucus committees on which occasions Liberal members played a full and effective role."

This is the first defection from the Liberal party since Trudeau assumed office in April, 1968. Although former Transport Minister Paul Hellyer left the cabinet earlier this year, he has remained a member of the party and MP for Toronto Trinity.
